England IS Intelligent
A Voice to Live Forever
Some Husbands Are Worse About Ladies' Clothes

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1920

In the Senate yesterday John Bull was accused of being intelligent. And he is guilty of the charge.

This country has just sent back in insulting fashion the representative of Russia, a country that has beaten back all its enemies. Senator France said yesterday: "I charge that our State Department is governed by the British government. It is simply awful to contemplate the loss of billions of trade with Russia. While we send home the representative of Russia, England receives another representative of Russia and prepares to monopolize Russia trade to her gain and our loss."

Quite so. Some cartoonist should show Miss Columbia as Trilby, with Svengali John Bull teaching her to sing: "I don't want to trade with Russia. I haven't anything to sell. I don't need the money. Give it to dear old J. B. Svengali!"

Caruso has five doctors around him now, but all those doctors will live to hear him sing better than ever for years to come.

Caruso, realizing that he is no longer twenty-five, will eat less, exercise more, drink plenty of water between meals and blossom again like the great artist that he is. He belongs to the greatest class, for he does everything without knowing why or how, like Dante, his illustrious fellow-countryman.

As you read of Caruso's illness you realize what a wonderful thing the talking machine has done for the human race and for future generations.

Jenny Lind, Patti, Paganini, all great musicians of days past, are forever dead. Nothing remains but fading memory or tradition.

Caruso's body will die, but his voice NEVER. What an inspiring achievement of science!

Engraved on an indestructible plate, capable of being duplicated indefinitely, Caruso's song will live as pure and noble as in the living voice. And the greatest tenor of the next century will be able to compare his own voice with the greatest of this age.

Professor Binder, head of the sociology department of New York University, has discovered and can prove that absence makes the heart grow foolish, that is, in the case of men. Commercial travelers, almost always away from home so much, are unstable husbands. One in nine gets a divorce. With farmers, who stay home where their wives can watch them, it is one in ninety-two.

If you ask why ship captains make good husbands, the answer is that there are only men on ships.

Mrs. Sanger, advocate of "birth control," says that the poor women should be allowed to decide the size of their families, as is done by rich women, to whom doctors readily give the information necessary.

You may not agree with Mrs. Sanger on birth control, since it might have prevented the birth of Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Jackson and other useful Americans, to say nothing of the desired army of cheap labor.

But you'll admit that Mrs. Sanger talks common sense when she discusses women's clothing. She says short skirts are more moral than long skirts—and they are. They are more moral because they are healthful—health is the most moral thing in the world. All immorality is unhealthy.

Mrs. Sanger says that on the beach, with bare legs, women interest foolish men much less than they do, for instance, in a "Florodora" sextette, kicking up their heels in long skirts.

Nature, let alone, is perfectly moral. In a beautiful nude statue, such as the Greeks made, there is not an unhealthy thought. But put stockings and garters on such a statue and see the difference.

$500 FOR RETURN OF BOY

Father Offers Reward for New Bedford Youth Thought Slain by Moonshiners

New Bedford, Dec. 28.—A reward of $500 for the return, dead or alive, of sixteen-year-old James F. Collins, Jr., was offered today by Alderman James F. Collins, who fears that his son has been murdered by moonshiners, mistaking him for a revenue officer, while he was hunting in Plainville woods ten days ago.

Spurred into activity by this reward, hundreds of policemen, firemen and citizens resumed their search in the twelve square miles of woods, north of this city, where the boy was last seen alive.

The father and mother of the boy admit, however, that they have practically abandoned the hope of ever seeing their son again.

They share the belief of the police that the boy's body is not above ground and that, if found, it will be unearthed from a hastily dug grave in which the young hunter's body was hidden by his murderer.

While the hundreds of searchers continued to comb every inch of the thickly wooded territory in the Plainville and Shawmut sections the police

WIDOW OF MacSWINEY RETURNS TO NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 28.—Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of the Lord Mayor of Cork, has returned to this city from her New England visit.

Close to 1,000 persons were assembled, despite the snowstorm, at the railroad station at Springfield, Mass., when the train arrived there from Worcester. Mrs. MacSwiney appeared on the car platform and acknowledged the greetings of the crowd. Miss Mary MacSwiney, the late Lord Mayor's sister, left the train at Springfield. She addresses a meeting there tonight.

BRANTING BELIEVES U. S. WILL JOIN LEAGUE

Copenhagen, Dec. 28. — Halmar Branting, head of the Swedish delegation at the League of Nations meeting in Geneva, has reported to his government that he believes America will shortly join the League of Nations, and that the league will soon be universal, said a dispatch from Stockholm today. Dr. Branting announced that the league's decision on the rival claims of Sweden and Finland to the Aland Islands would be announced on February 15.

COUNTESS MARKIEWICZ GIVEN 2 YEARS AT HARD LABOR

Dublin, Dec. 28.—The Countess Markiewicz, who recently was convicted by a court-martial here on charges of conspiracy against the British government, was today sentenced to two years' imprisonment at hard labor.

LEAPS OR FALLS 7 STORIES

Daniel McIntire, Boston Salesman, Found Dead in Worcester Hotel

Worcester, Dec. 28.—Daniel McIntire, traveling man for a Boston concern, was found dead at the bottom of an air shaft at the Bancroft Hotel today.

He had jumped or fallen from the window of his room on the seventh floor of the hotel.

He was in his night clothes, and his street clothes were neatly folded in the room.

The body was taken to the morgue for examination by the medical examiner. The only wound on the body was a slight incision on the left foot.

McInsyre registered at the hotel yesterday, and went to his room about 11 o'clock last night. The body was found today by John Morgan, a watchman.

MUDGETT SENTENCED TO 30 YEARS IN PRISON

Hyde Park, Vt., Dec. 28.—A sentence of not less than thirty nor more than thirty-five years at hard labor in the Vermont State prison at Windsor was given Arthur Mudgett, the thirty-seven-year-old lumberman and "man about town," by Judge Sherman R. Moulton in the Lamoille County Court when a jury returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter against Mudgett in causing the death of Amy Shonio.

One member of his counsel said that exceptions in the case would be taken to the Supreme Court.

DENY BREWERY RIGHT TO MAKE "MEDICINAL" BEER

Milwaukee, Dec. 28.—The request of a Wisconsin brewery to manufacture beer for medicinal purposes has been tentatively denied, it is announced by Thomas A. Delaney, prohibition director. Delaney has been informed by physicians that in some cases they would prefer to prescribe beer instead of whiskey.

SLEEPING SICKNESS KILLS ANOTHER IN DETROIT

Detroit, Dec. 28.—Sleeping sickness has claimed another victim here, the fourth in six months. Frank L. Cross, general manager of the Detroit City Gas Company, died after suffering from the malady for six weeks, during which period he was conscious, only at intervals.

DOCTOR'S AUTO ROBBED OF $100 INSTRUMENTS

Dr. E. F. Garripay of No. 544 Western avenue, Lynn, reported to the police in that city that his cabinet bag containing surgical instruments and valued at $100, was stolen from his automobile while he was calling upon a patient.

THIEVES' VICTIM NEAR DEATH

South End Man Becomes Unconscious After Telling Wife of Attack

Police today are investigating a story told by Fred Reccard of No. 498 Columbus avenue, who is in the City Hospital on the danger list, suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and concussion of the brain.

Reccard staggered into his home early today and told his wife that he had been assaulted and robbed by two men in a room of a house on Harrison street.

He then lapsed into unconsciousness, and has remained in a semi-conscious condition, unable to throw any light on the assault, ever since.

Arrangements have been made to photograph his skull with the X-ray in an effort to ascertain the extent and nature of his injury.

TWO HELD FOR THEFT OF HORNBLOWER LIQUORS

Plymouth, Dec. 28.—John F. Raymond, Charles B. Proctor and John J. Smith were arraigned here on charges growing out of the theft of whiskey from the cellars of Henry Hornblower, Boston banker, and his son Ralph. From the home of Hornblower, Sr., thirteen cases of Scotch were stolen. From the home of Ralph Hornblower a few bottles of beer were taken. Raymond was held for the grand jury on the charge of breaking and entering. On the charge of selling the liquor illegally to Smith he was fined $200 and sentenced to three months in the House of Correction. On the charge of keeping it he was fined $200 more. Smith, charged with receiving the stolen property, was discharged. Proctor was held for the grand jury, charged with being in possession of stolen property.

JOBLESS MAN BEGS FOR JAIL SENTENCE

Westfield, Dec. 28.—Pleading that he was footsore and tired of searching for work, Frank F. Smith applied to the jail authorities for admission. This was refused and he went to the police station and asked for a jail sentence through the Winter. The police were unable to help him and he appealed to the courts and a thirty-day sentence was given him.

CONVENTION TO SELECT BISHOP'S SUCCESSOR

New York, Dec. 28.—A successor to Bishop Charles S. Burch will be elected at a convention of Protestant Episcopal bishops and laymen in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine on January 26.

REPORT FIUME HAS FALLEN

Fragment of Shell From Warship in Harbor Wounds D'Annunzio

London, Dec. 18.—"There is reason to believe that Italian troops have occupied Fiume," said Premier Giolitti of Italy today, according to a Rome dispatch.

Thirty of the Italian regulars attacking Fiume have been killed and 200 wounded, said a dispatch from Trieste today.

A telegram received at 5:10 this morning stated that the capitulation of the city by the legionaries was believed imminent.

The Mayor of Fiume had requested a truce, but it was refused. The Mayor then arranged to meet General Ferrario for fresh negotiations.

Nine civilian residents of Fiume have been killed and thirty wounded by the bombardment of the city, said a dispatch from Milan.

A new version of the manner in which Gabriele D'Annunzio was wounded came from Milan. It was said that a shell from a warship in the harbor struck the governor's palace and exploded and that a fragment struck the warrior poet.

D'Annunzio sent the following Christmas greetings to the government at Rome by wireless, according to a dispatch to the Daily Express:

NEW LONDON MILLS TO OPERATE ON FULL TIME

New London, Dec. 28.—Beginning January 3, the mills of the Brainerd & Armstrong Company, manufacturers of silk goods, will operate full time schedule—forty-eight hours a week. A 15 per cent wage reduction is announced. The company says in its statement that it will suffer a financial loss, but that its employes will be relieved of the distress which unemployment entails.

FATHER MURRAY DIES AT ST. JOHN'S SEMINARY

The Rev. Leo Michael Murray, professor of moral theology at St. John's Seminary, Brighton, and son of Postmaster and Mrs. Patrick J. Murray of Revere, died suddenly at the seminary.

Father Murray was born in Revere twenty-six years ago, and studied at Boston College and St. John's Seminary. He was ordained to the priesthood in October, 1918.

FIREMAN HURT IN BLAST

Lieut. Fottler Blown Through Window by Coal Gas Explosion at Dorchester Fire

Lieutenant Edward W. Fottler, attached to Chemical 5, was fighting a fire in the basement of the William E. Endicott School, Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, early today, when a pocket of coal gas exploded, blowing him through a window and half way across the street.

[illegible] have been slightly burned about the back and neck, and taken to his home, No. 977 Blue Hill avenue, in the automobile of Deputy Chief Daniel F. Sennot.

The fire in the school basement which did damage estimated at $100, was started by spontaneous combustion in the soft coal pile.

Berkshire Hunters to Pursue Bear

Pittsfield, Dec. 28.—Cortlandt Field Bishop of New York and Lenox is to conduct a black bear hunt on Greylock Mountain on Friday. That one or two bears live in a cave on or near the State reservation is certain.

Mr. Bishop is rounding up the big game hunters of Central and Southern Berkshire for the drive.

These sportsmen, who have hunted grizzlies in the Rockies, are interested in the hunt: William B. Osgood Field, his son, Frederick Vanderbilt Field of Lenox; Z. Marshall Crane of Dalton and Dr. Bruce W. Paddock of Pittsfield.

A bear was seen Christmas by Samuel Rounds of South Williamstown. The animal, sleek and fat, which Rounds says would weigh 350 pounds, crossed the road five rods ahead of him near the E. Parmelee Prentice estate. Rounds was unarmed.

FIRE DAMAGES MAYFLOWER

President's Yacht Threatened by Blaze at Washington Navy Yard

Washington, Dec. 28.—Fire which broke out in the galley today for a time threatened the destruction of the Presidential yacht Mayflower.

Concerted efforts by sailors and men of the fire fighting force at the Washington Navy Yard finally checked the fire. It is said that the damage done can readily be repaired.

11 Slain in New Wave of Irish Violence

Dublin, Dec. 28.—A new wave of Irish violence has followed the Christmas holiday chiefly in the martial law zone and many shootings and other disorders were reported today.

Ten civilians and one policeman have been killed and seventeen civilians and two policemen wounded.

It develops that one of the five Sinn Feiners killed in the battle at Bruff, County Limerick, when soldiers raided a dance, was commandant of the local branch of the Irish Republican Army. Two civilians who were wounded in that fight are reported to be dying. The policeman was killed by the civilians.

A farmer was killed in County Tyrone by a band of armed masked men who were raiding farms.

Two civilians—Maurice Reidy and John Lynn—were shot to death at Ballydwyer.

A woman was killed at Limerick.

Two large clothing stores were burned in the business district of Tipperary.

The Irish jails are so full of prisoners that many arrested persons are being sent to Welsh jails.

The British government has begun a determined campaign to prevent army weapons from falling into the hands of the Sinn Feiners throughout the United Kingdom. A dispatch from Glasgow today said that a soldier of the Dunbartonshire territorials had been sentenced to a year at hard labor for selling his rifle and bayonet to the Sinn Feiners.

N. E. ROADS MAKE FINAL PLEA

Begin End of Testimony Before Commission Asking for More Revenue

Washington, Dec. 28.—The New England railroads today entered upon a final submission of testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission in support of their plea that they should receive a greater proportion of the through class rates on freight traffic in order to prevent heavier losses to the lines in that territory.

Further testimony of a technical character, with detailed exhibits to support their claim that there should be a readjustment of the division rates with connecting trunk line roads, was offered by counsel for the carriers.

George M. Wood, general freight agent for the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, presented in detailed form figures showing that the proportionate revenues on existing rates discriminate against the New England carriers.

The main contention of Wood and other witnesses was that as three-fifths of the freight traffic handled by the New England carriers is interstate business, the relatively short haul by the New England roads should carry a higher division rate than is now allowed.

Guard against ill-health by taking Father John's Medicine—pure food tonic. 65 years of success as a body builder. Builds new health and strength.—Advt.

WARM WEATHER ON WAY HERE

Cold Tonight and Tomorrow, but Big Rise in Temperature is Forecast Thursday

Boston coal dealers are in for a wallop if the local weather man proves right in his forecast that a warm wave is coming.

In the northwestern sections of the continent, where the warm wave has started, the thermometers showed a rise of more than 50 degrees within 24 hours, and still going up.

The central portions of the United States, however, are still in the grip of a cold wave. At Chicago the temperature today dropped to four below zero, and it was freezing at Pensacola and New Orleans.

LEAVES GOOD-BY NOTE TO GIRL

Harold W. Greene, Lynn Veteran, Ends Life by Shooting in Bow, N. H.

Harold W. Greene, twenty-one years old, a World War hero, of No. 73 Johnson street, Lynn, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart on a country road in Bow, N. H.

On his person, according to New Hampshire authorities, was found a letter to a young woman of Lynn telling her he would be dead when she received it, and bidding her good-bye.

Greene's mother said today she believed illness and despondency caused his suicide.

He had been moody and depressed ever since his return from France.

He returned to Bow yesterday, accompanied by a young woman, who had also passed Christmas with relatives in Lynn.

Mrs. Greene today denied that this girl was his sweetheart or that he was strongly interested in any girl.

He was found a short distance from the house where he took up his residence not long ago to rest and regain control of his nerves.

Harry Hough of Bow found him, after hearing the shot. The gun lay in the roadway. Greene was on his back. His coat was open and his right glove removed to make his aim sure.

New Hampshire authorities in announcing that a farewell note had been found on the suicide refused to disclose the name of the girl to whom it was addressed.

Medical Referee Loren A. Sanborn of Concord took charge of the body. Lynn Post of the American Legion will make arrangements for the funeral.

Greene served on the Mexican border in 1916, and enlisted in April, 1917, for the World War. He first served as a cook, but was transferred to an aviation unit, with which he remained throughout the conflict. He had an enviable record as a soldier.

GIRL IMMIGRANT AND BOARDER IN ELOPEMENT

Worcester, Dec. 28.—Missing since Sunday, Mary Josephine Gill, aged eighteen, and three months over from Ireland, is believed to have eloped with Gustav Platton, a Greek, who has been boarding at the home of her uncle, John Blake, No. 11 Orange street. On receiving a telegram saying that the pair had married and were bound out-West, the uncle sought police aid. Another telegram to the girl's aunt said she was on her way home.

POLICE SERGEANT CLAIMS MAN TRIED TO BRIBE HIM

George Dushko, No. 97 Circuit road, Roxbury, arrested for the alleged sale of a pint of liquor to an unidentified man, is also charged with attempting to bribe a policeman. Sergeant Dickinson of the Dudley street police station claims that Dushko offered him $100 while they were walking to the police station.

FATHER FEARS COLLINS BOY WAS SLAIN BY MOONSHINERS

POSSES COMB PLAINVILLE WOODS FOR LOST HUNTER

They recalled the story told by Mrs. Annie Hatch, a resident of Shawmut avenue, who is confident that she saw the boy near her home on the Saturday afternoon that he disappeared; that she heard a boyish cry, a few seconds later, beseechingly saying "don't, don't, don't"—and then heard three shots.

Young Collins was last seen alive Saturday afternoon in the Plainville woods, carrying his shotgun and accompanied by a dog, belonging to John Doyle, a resident of that section of the city.

He had left home, at No. 27 Trinity street, about three miles from Plainville, earlier in the day to hunt for rabbits. He wore a regulation army khaki suit, hip boots, a blue navy stocking cap and carried a single barreled twelve-gauge shotgun.

DOG RETURNED ALONE.

He rode to Plainville on his bicycle and left his machine at Doyle's home. The dog came back at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but the boy never returned.

The uniform worn by the boy was part of his equipment as a member of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps of the New Bedford High School, where he was a student, a fact which strengthens the theory that the youthful hunter may have been killed by moonshiners, who mistook him for a Federal officer and then realizing their mistake, disposed of his body to hide traces of their crime.

Since his disappearance a score or more residents of that section of New Bedford have been grilled for hours by the police for clues that might lead to evidence of this nature. Several of them are known to have been engaged in the illicit manufacture of liquor under cover of the dense woods.

TRAILED BY MOONSHINER.

One of them even admitted to Chief of Police Edward L. Doherty that he mistook the boy for a revenue officer earlier in the day.

"I followed him for three hours," he told the chief, "because I thought he was a federal agent and because I wanted to satisfy myself that he was, or was not."

Less than a week before young Collins was swallowed up in the thick woodlands, revenue officers went through the territory in a series of sensational raids. They discovered several stills, confiscated hundreds of gallons of "moonshine" and made several arrests.

The police, meanwhile, are continuing their investigation of a story told by Joseph Blais, aged twenty-four, an inhabitant of the Plainville woods, who declares that three weeks ago one of the moonshiners, arrested in a Federal raid, threatened to "get him" because he informed the officers of the whereabouts of his still.

Blais is of the opinion that this "moonshiner," laying for him, saw the Collins boy, and thinking he was Blais shot him. The "moonshiner" suspected by Blais is to be closely examined by the police.

THINKS SON IS DEAD.

That the liquor makers will shoot rather than be caught is the assertion of police inspectors, who recall that less than six months ago three Frenchmen walking through the Plainville woods were shot at and that one of them was seriously wounded.

"From the beginning I have not thought that my boy ran away," said Alderman Collins, when telling of his boy's disappearance to a Boston American reporter.

"It is preposterous to think he wandered into a swamp. Rabbits are not hunted in marshy ground and James was too intelligent a boy, and too familiar with hunting to go looking for them anywhere but on dry land.

"SOMEONE IS LYING."

"I am not satisfied that the stories told by everyone living in that section are absolutely truthful. There is contradiction on some essential features. Someone is lying and there must be a reason. I feel that someone who has been questioned by the police knows more of my boy's whereabouts than he wanted to tell."

Mrs. Collins declares that the theory that her son may have run away is preposterous. "Several persons saw him after he entered the woods," said she. "The bloodhounds followed his tracks for a part of the way and then it is foolish to believe that a boy would go away in any army uniform and hip boots.

Young Collins, who was big for his age, stood about five feet two inches and weighed 115 pounds. He had blue eyes and slightly turned nose. His front upper teeth were false, part of a bridge, which was fastened on a tooth on either side of his mouth with gold caps.

Wilson's Daughters at White House

Washington, Dec. 28.—There is a family reunion at the White House today.

The President and Mrs. Wilson have as their house guests Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo. Miss Margaret Wilson is also at the White House.

[illegible] daughters of the President are in Washington to attend the wedding tonight of their cousin, Miss Marjorie Brown, of Atlanta to Benjamin King of New York. Miss Wilson will be maid of honor.

President Wilson wants to attend the ceremony, but doubt was [illegible] to the wisdom of his encountering the night air.

YEOMAN FLEES WITH $72,000

Paymaster's Clerk Believed to Have Disappeared by Airplane With Cash

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 28.—Yeoman W. J. Meyers and the $72,000 payroll of his ship, the destroyer Satterlee, are missing. The Navy, Department of Justice and police are co-operating country-wide in a hunt for the fugitive, who has an eight hours' start on his pursuers. Outskirts of this city are being combed for trace of an airplane getaway.

Meyers, who has a third-class rating, has been on duty in the paymaster's office. The money was sent to the destroyer from Washington for the next three monthly paydays during the South American cruise of the Satterlee scheduled to leave here next week. It was signed for by W. J. Meyers at 9 o'clock.

Paymaster W. H. Buck came on board at 5 o'clock looking for the pay roll. Then it was revealed that Meyers had been missing since morning. The express company furnished the sequel when asked for the package.

The navy yard immediately sent out a detail of more than 100 sailors, who scoured the city in vain for Meyers. It was learned, however, that he had been seen buying civilian clothes in a local store and that he had confided in shipmates that he planned to go to Baltimore in an airplane.

Meyers was assigned to the Satterlee about six months ago. He hails from Allentown, Pa. His ship has been in commission since Fall of last year.

PLAN LOANS TO IDLE MILL MEN

Lawrence Mayor Suggests Giving Help to Families Too Proud to Beg

Lawrence, Dec. 28.—A municipal fund from which heads of families out of work and in need of financial assistance could borrow to tide them over the Winter is the plan which Mayor William P. White proposed today at a meeting of the recently organized Municipal Relief Committee.

Instead of appropriating money for soup kitchens and fuel stations as has [illegible] in the past, the Mayor suggested loans upon a business basis would come closer to meeting the requirements of hundreds of families which otherwise would suffer privation in silence rather than admit themselves subjects of charity.

It is proposed to manage the loan upon the lines adopted by quasi philanthropic banking institutions, where the individual's word of honor and personal note is taken as security.

"There are hundreds of families among the 16,000 workers out of a job," said the Mayor, "which would gladly take advantage of such a fund.

"Private institutions have found that their losses from bad debts in cases of this sort are almost negligible, and I am sure that would be the case here.

"I have particularly in mind the many English speaking families too proud to beg for aid, too proud to accept charity, and yet in dire need of assistance."

There are 16,000 workers out of a job in Lawrence and at least as many more on short time.

MISS FRANCES A. ROSE OF LEXINGTON TO WED

Mr. and Mrs. John Rose of No. 14 Muzzey street, Lexington, announces the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances Anna Rose, to Carl L. Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Nelson of No. 146 Orient avenue, Lexington Heights. During the late war Miss Rose did much Red Cross work. Mr. Nelson served overseas as a corporal in C Company, 167th Infantry, Rainbow Division.

SOMERVILLE POST TO CHANGE NAME

The Somerville Post, No. 529, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, has voted to change its name to the George Dilboy Post, No. 529, in honor of George Dilboy, private first class in Company H, 103d Infantry, 26th Division, who is noted for his distinguished war services.

Is New Year Resolution Worth While?

IT'S A HEAVY LOAD BOYS BUT HANG ON

Resolved: that that old institution
The hardy New Year's resolution
Though greatly maligned
Is really designed
To aid in the soul's evolution.
—From Lyrics of No Importance.

Is a New Year's resolution worth while?

This burning question has been puzzling men and women for a long time now, along with the "What are the Wild Waves Saying?" query and the baffling puzzle as to the age of Ann.

So the Young Reporter decided he would settle it. This being the age of plebiscites he decided to take a vote on the matter and he went out into the highways and byways and questioned a lot of people who come into contact with humanity in all its phases.

The verdict was as indicated in the near-verse at the top. The attitude of the average man toward a New Year's resolution is that, "for all its faults he loves it still."

Not all the score of more persons interviewed by the Young Reporter agreed that New Year's resolutions were frequently carried out, mind you.

PASTORS LAUD RESOLVES.

Their position was that if Gladys Smith, for instance, resolves to stop eating chocolates and learn self sacrifice, that is a good thing. If Gladys breaks her resolution New Year's night, when her young man arrives with a pound of sweets, that is her misfortune. She has had the benefit of a good aspiration.

Here are a few excerpts from the statements of persons interviewed:

"Good resolutions, like fainting women, should be carried out."—Rev. Dr. D. M. Lockrow, Baptist clergyman.

"New Year's resolutions are worth making, if only for the pleasure of breaking them."—Miss Fannie C. Osgood, treasurer of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters.

"New Year's resolutions are the best tonic for a drooping spirit."—Rev. George W. Cooke.

"It is always good to make a resolution for good, even if it is kept only a few days."—Rev. A. M. Rihbany, pastor of the Church of the Disciples, Back Bay.

The Rev. A. H. Nazarian, former pastor of the People's Temple, says: "It is always a good thing to make good resolutions. They are like showers. They refresh the soil of the soul and give it a new start. They are reviving and healthful. They make people think anew. The idea of a clean slate is a good one. It keeps our ideals in mind. It gives a good example to the young. New Year's resolutions may not be kept but they strengthen us for the next battle with ourselves."

"TRY EVERYTHING ONCE."

Miss Osgood of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters believes in "trying everything once." Therefore, she is for the New Year's resolution. She doubts that one was ever kept, but believes making them helps to keep people occupied and contented.

Pastor Rihbany would have people make good resolutions every day. He says: "The human mind is so constituted that circumstances change resolutions. But it is always well to make a resolution for good."

"Every resolution has its value on character," says Miss Margaret Foley, deputy commissioner of Children's Institutions in Boston.

"We may break them, but if we do most of us feel badly and try a again. It's like a man taking the pledge—he really feels at the time that he is going to keep it and his good intentions are strengthened. We all fall; in the words of the Scripture the just fall seven times a day. But we all ought to make the effort to be good.

"Every time we make such an effort we grow stronger. It is particularly noticeable among the children at the Suffolk School. They earn their way out under the merit system. Each child must get 700 merits and if he does wrong he loses 10. If he does very wrong he loses from 25 to 100. A month ago I said to all the boys coming in that if they would make a perfect record they might go home for Christmas. They have all been perfect so far, because they made a resolve.

"Human nature is weak, but it is capable of growing strong. Good resolutions help."

"It all depends," this New Year's resolution business, according to Miss Mabel Gillespie, executive secretary of the Woman's Trade Union League.

"The individual should decide for himself or herself," she says. "A resolution kept, is good. One broken is worse than useless."

WOMAN PESSIMISTIC.

Miss Katherine Shepard, superintendent of the Household Nursing Association, is one of the very frankly pessimistic as to the value of resolutions on January 1.

"I do not wish to discourage any high aspiration, nor to throw cold water where it is not needed," she says, "but it does seem that New Year's resolutions are made in a state of mental ecstasy which interferes with their fulfillment. I never heard of one being kept."

Mrs. Susan Fitzgerald, suffrage leader, is strong for the stern resolves formulated about January 1 all over the world. She even says she almost remembers one that was kept. "On general principles you cannot afford to scorn resolutions," she says. "They jack up wobbling characters and set a mark. They bring you nearer the goal. Of course you never reach it in this world of imperfection."

The Rev. J. Frank Chase of the Watch and Ward Society says his work has shown him the value of resolutions. He says "If you once get some people started right they will go right. That's what New Year's means to many people."

An army man's view is given by Major Vernon W. Hall, head of the educational and recreational system of the first army corps area. He is decidedly cynical. "I never in all my experience knew of a New Year's resolution that was kept," he says. "This ought not to discourage the making of them, but it ought to warn everyone that they will probably be broken soon."

JAP TROUBLE UP TO CALIFORNIA

Settlement of Controversy Over Land May End With New Legislation

By International News Service.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Final settlement of the controversy between the United States and Japan over the California law prohibiting Japanese from owning land may rest with the State of California itself, it was learned at the State Department today.

Following informal announcement from the State Department that one of the propositions being discussed in the conversations between Ambassador Shidehara and Roland Morris, United States ambassador to Japan, was the question of the enactment of a new law in California. California members of Congress arranged a meeting to discuss the advisability of proposing new legislation to the State government.

While the State Department announced that no definite agreement had been reached in the conversations with Japan, Representative Kahn said that he was of the opinion that Japan has withdrawn her opposition to the recently enacted law prohibiting Japanese from acquiring land in California.

Representative Kahn made this statement folowing a conference with Ambassador Morris. It was indicated, however, that if Japan has withdrawn her opposition, it is only tentatively, pending the enactment of new laws by California covering the subject of land ownership.

Members of the California delegation will discuss recommendations that the State Legislature amend the Japanese land-owning prohibitory act, that the restrictions apply to all aliens. Officials of the State Department have said they believe such action would settle the controversy.

DEMOCRATS HIT BY HARDING

His Paper Says System Permitting Filibuster Is 'Manifest Absurdity'

By International News Service.

Marion, O., Dec. 28.—Senator Porter J. McComber, of North Dakota, found a wide range of subjects open to him when he conferred today with Senator Harding.

Senator McCumber is a ranking member of the Senate Finance Committee which has in charge the tariff legislation now being vigorously opposed by Democratic members of Congress.

An indication of Senator Harding's attitude toward Democratic obstructive tactics may be gleaned from an editorial appearing today in the Marion Star, of which he still is editor. The Star points out what it declares is the manifest absurdity of a system which permits a defeated party to obstruct or delay measures favored by the successful party to four months after election.

Oscar A. Straus of New York, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor in the Roosevelt Cabinet, came to Marion to discuss the financial situation and the complications in Europe. Mr. Straus has been regarded as a possible ambassador to Germany.

Possibilities of a Democratic filibuster, as indicated by Senator Harrison and others, were discussed by the President-elect and his senatorial colleagues, it was said.

Senator Harding, in his Minneapolis speech, advocated tariff for the protection of farm products and is known to be interested in the pending legislation.

Senator McCumber, who is a member of the Agricultural Affairs Committee, is in a position to give expert advice on the probable action in the Senate on appropriation measures.

WHEELER RAPS GALLAGHER

"Dry" Leader, Discussing McGuiness' Death, Blames New Jersey Governor

Washington, Dec. 28.—"The Governor of New Jersey in his nullification campaign against prohibition aided in this offence," declared Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, in a statement issued today concerning the killing of Prohibition Officer McGuiness at Bayonne, N. J.

"Bootleggers and rum-runners are not the only ones responsible for the murder of Federal and State prohibition officers," Wheeler said. "Every public officer who takes an oath of office to support the Constitution and enforce the law and then condemns the law and condones the offence is inviting the murder of these officers.

"The United States District Attorney in Boston, who spends more time condemning the law than enforcing it, is jeopardizing the lives of officers in that State.

"A Federal judge some months ago condemned the law enforcement officers in his court who were operating in dangerous territory, and gave a suggestion about guns being used against them. Within a month two faithful Federal agents were shot within the jurisdiction of this court by these outlaws.

"The Federal Grand Jury in Milwaukee encouraged these outrages by their recent inexcusable declaration against the law. The United States District Attorney, who evidently permitted it without a protest to the court, is in an unenviable position."

Sandisfield, Dec. 28.—"The Sage of Sandisfield," Henry S. Manley, aged eighty-four, and famed for his contributions to newspapers, is dead.

TO SHARE IN BIG FORTUNE

Massachusetts People Heirs of Rich Glasgow, Scotland, Shipbuilder

Several Bay State persons learned today that they were beneficiaries under the will of William Smith, a wealthy retired shipbuilder, who died recently in Glasgow, Scotland.

While the size of the estate is not definitely known, lawyers believe it will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Advertisements inserted in Massachusetts papers by British lawyers indicate that the Bay State heirs will share the residue of the estate and one-half the interest on that residue. This one-half interest is about $4,000. That is the only clue to the value of the property.

LLOYD GEORGE BROWBEATS KING GEORGE INTO SUBMISSIO

SACRIFICED SELF FOR EMPIRE

British Sovereign Yielded in MacSwiney Case to Preserve the Monarchy

(This remarkable article was written for Universal Service by a retired member of the English royal household, dealing in the most intimate and authoritative manner with what the writer terms the "last phase of the British monarchy.")

London, Dec. 28.—It is fortunate for the preservation of the English monarchy that the throne is occupied at present by a man of the character and disposition of King George.

It is almost certain that had King Edward been on the throne during the peace conference his late Majesty would have asserted his right to direct and influence the negotiations and have gravely imperilled the security of the monarchy in doing so.

Future historians may write of King George as George the Submissive.

The golden rule of King George's life since he ascended the throne has been to avoid having any quarrel with his ministers or of interfering in the slightest way with the home or foreign policy of the Cabinet.

FORCED TO APOLOGIZE.

The only occasion on which King George has broken this rule was when he was led into using his influence in an attempt to secure the release of Mayor MacSwiney, who was starving himself to death in prison.

That incident resulted in Lord Stamfordam, private secretary to the King, having to write an apologetic letter to the press explaining why it was impossible for His Majesty to exercise his prerogative of pardoning MacSwiney.

Even when the house servants of Buckingham Palace asked leave of the King to send a petition to Lloyd George asking clemency for MacSwiney, the King sent a message to his household through his secretary, saying he had no objection to the petition and sincerely hoped that the members of his household would have more influence with the Prime Minister than he had.

His Majesty is very unlikely to break his golden rule of not attempting to govern. Upon the strict observance of that rule he believes, and probably rightly, that the safety of the monarchy depends.

PREMIER REFUSED KING.

Not even in affairs that might be described as almost personal will King George ever attempt to run counter to the will of the Prime Minister.

Not very long since King George for family reasons desired that either he or the Prince of Wales (the latter for choice) should pay a visit to the Mecklenberg Strelitz family in Germany. The Mecklin Strelitz are near relatives of Queen Mary and have always been on terms of the most intimate friendship with her majesty.

The British government pays an annuity of £6,000 to the aged Duke of Mecklenberg Strelitz. Payment of it was suspended during the war, but the arrears due have long since been settled.

One of the reasons why it was refused was that Hugo Stinnes, the war-made German millionaire, objected to the suggestion, because he thought that it would be impolitic—from the German point of view—that King George should visit Germany.

PRINCE ANNOYED.

When King George, shortly after the ascension of his father, visited Australia, the visit was planned entirely by the late King, and not one single reference concerning it was made by King Edward to the Prime Minister or Cabinet of the day. Parliament was simply asked to grant the expenses of the tour and that was the end of the matter.

But when the present Prince of Wales went to Canada and the United States and Australia, not only had the whole program of the visits to be submitted to the Prime Minister, but any speeches of the least importance that were to be made by the Prince had to receive the approval of the Prime Minister and the Cabinet.

Throughout the whole of the peace negotiations King George assented to anything done by his ministers without a word of comment.

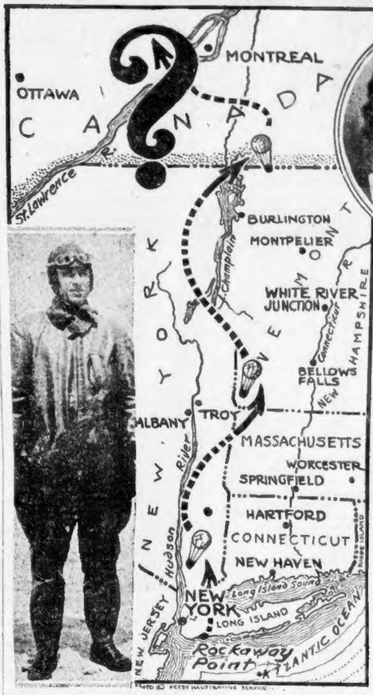
Clings to Belief Lost Balloonists Live



Map depicts known course of the missing naval balloon which left Rockaway station, New York, two weeks ago. Dotted line shows path of flight as far as the Canadian border, where it was last sighted. It is believed the balloon has been wrecked somewhere in the wilds of Canada and her crew of three naval lieutenants have perished. Insert shows Lieutenant Walter Hinton, one of the missing crew.

Mrs. Anna L. Farrell of Brooklyn, wife of Lieutenant Stephen A. Farrell, one of the three missing naval balloonists, and her daughter, Emily.

New York, Dec. 28.—Though naval flying men in this country and Canada have abandoned all hope for the three missing naval lieutenants, who started out in a balloon from the Rockaway Point Field in an effort to break the long distance balloon record, a little woman sits at home in Brooklyn today, clinging desperately to her belief in her husband's safety.

She is Mrs. Stephen A. Farrell, wife of Lieutenant Farrell, who with naval lieutenants A. L. Kloor and Walter Hinton of trans-Atlantic flight fame, were in the ill-fated air craft.

Two weeks have elapsed since the spherical navy balloon started on its flight, and not a word has been received from the fliers. No hint even of their possible fate has been learned, although aeroplanes, manned by the pick of the American and Canadian fliers, have searched the country over which they are supposed to have journeyed.

SEARCH CONTINUES.

Although the searchers have abandoned all hope of finding the naval lieutenants alive, the search for the balloon, the A-5598, is being kept up constantly both by American and Canadian airmen, while woodsmen and guides of the Canadian fastnesses are combing the snow-covered woods and valleys of those sections.

While the search continues Mrs. Farrell waits close to the telephone at her home, No. 1701 Woodbine street, Brooklyn, confident that the next time the bell rings it will be a message from the Rockaway Point Flying Field to give her good news of the missing balloon and its heroic crew.

DRIFTED INTO WILDS.

"They have all the safety appliances which usually go to the equipment of navy balloons," she explained. "That is the chief basis of my hope that they will be heard from yet.

"I have held right along to the theory that was expressed earlier in the search, that they have drifted into the wilds of Canada. I think this theory will be substantiated when the facts are known, which will be when the rivers and snows freeze so that messengers can get out.

"Meantime I am keeping in close touch with the Rockaway station and get all the news received there. Some day I am going to get a telephone call telling me that all is right with my man."

Washington, Dec. 28.—Although the navy department has not yet gazetted as lost the naval balloon which left Far Rockaway two weeks ago, Secretary Daniels stated that he had "almost lost hope" of the balloon or its occupants being found.

CARDINAL GIBBONS GROWING STRONGER

Baltimore, Dec. 28.—Although Cardinal Gibbons, who has been ill for more than two weeks at the home of Robert T. Shriver, in Carroll county, Md., remains in his bed a great deal of the time, according to Dr. Charles O'Donovan, the prelate's physician, his patient continues to show signs of returning strength.

Have You Ever Seen a Blue Lobster?

Ever see a blue lobster?

A doctor who says he not only saw one but ate it has started things. The boss, who says he is certain he has experienced every brand of lobster possible, doesn't believe it.

If anyone else has ever seen any blue lobsters he wants to know it.

The New York physician who claims to have seen one says he found his at Ogunquit, Me., under a promontory known as Israel's Head. He describes it as "a beautiful, limpid, opalescent blue, tinges with white and darker spots." Incidentally it has a soft shell.

If anyone else has discovered the doctor's brand will they please write?

Boston Doctors Frown on Hiccoughs "Fad"

Is the hiccough a disease or a fad?

In New York and other places that follow closely the latest thing from Paris the hiccough became a fad of the fashionable, upon the heels of the report from the French capital that Sara Bernhardt's latest play was held up fifteen minutes while the audience hiccoughed.

"What Paris has done Gotham will do," has long been a slogan of the New Yorkers.

Now the question is whether the fad is going to spread to Boston.

Dr. Andreas F. Christian of Marlboro street admits that he "views the hiccough with alarm," having had one serious case in his own hospital within the week.

This doctor believes that tapeworms frequently cause the pesky hiccough

RECOMMENDS ETHER.

Dr. Eliza Taylor Ransom, founder of the first hospital in Boston for twilight sleep, also regards the hiccough with more or less disfavor.

"It's no laughing matter," says she, "though I admit people have died and worms have eaten them, but not from hiccoughs. However, it all depends upon whether the hiccough is functional or otherwise. If they seem at all serious get a doctor."

But other physicians are not so afraid of the hiccough. If it gets you, use ether, says a doctor of the City Hospital out-patient department.

"But," he adds, "don't get all 'het' up over hiccoughs, because if you do they'll sure get you. In other words, the hiccough is almost certain to hit the neurasthenic—but if you have 'em, why, chloretum capsules are a cure, and so is ether, one teaspoonful of it.

HOLD YOUR BREATH.

"Hiccoughs are a spasm of the diaphram—a temperamental disease," according to Dr. Bernard J. Carey of the State Department of Health, who added that he could not be sure of any sovereign remedy for the malady, especially when it is a fad.

"Hold your breath and drink eleven sips of water. That often effects a cure. If the darn things keep coming, why go to bed, keep quiet and take a little bicarbonate of soda. Some of the cases, however, won't be cured by the whole materia medica."

Dr. Francis P. Denny, Public Health Physician of Brookline, looked gravely serious when his opinion on the imminence of a hiccough epidemic was asked.

"Hiccoughs," he explained, "are a symptom and not a disease, even if they are a fad. To treat them the cause should be removed."

Dr. Denny quoted Aristophanes, writer of Greek plays in the days before the censorship, who suggested tickling the nose with a feather as a sure cure for the trouble.

TRY PULLING TONGUE.

"Ice with a spoonful of lemon juice is good; so is salt and vinegar, and a strong pull on the tongue sometimes will put an end to the hiccoughing."

Dr. Victor M. Safford, of the City Department of Health, scoffed at the idea of a hiccough epidemic.

"Sometimes," he admitted, "hiccoughs indicate a serious nervous affection and are virtually incurable. When they are due to some slight intestinal or digestive disorder any simple remedy like holding the breath, swallowing or sudden jolt will cure them."

But all that leaves the question of the actual epidemic or hiccoughs in Boston still unsettled.

"So far as I know there's no way of telling how many cases of hiccough there may be in Boston today," said Health Commissioner Woodward today.

WARNS AGAINST PANIC.

"There is no way of telling how many cases there are normally, so even if we could get a line on the number today that would mean nothing for we could not tell if they were more than usual.

"Unquestionably if people get excited about hiccoughs, more cases will come to light.

"Hiccoughs may be brought on by nervousness or they may be due to stomach trouble.

"Sometimes they are hard to cure, but the old practice of holding the breath and swallowing water is about the best cure for the average case I know of. It is based on sound physiology. So was the old remedy of giving snuff to induce sneezing."

"If the hiccough persists try a sedative and go to sleep as soon as you can," advised Dr. Wilson, superintendent of the City Hospital.

CLARA HAMON TO ESCAPE CHAIR

Life Imprisonment All That Will Be Asked if She Is Convicted

Ardmore, Okla., Dec. 28.—Life imprisonment will be the penalty expected by the law from Clara Smith Hamon, if she is convicted of the murder of Jake L. Hamon, Oklahoma politician and oil king, according to County Attorney Russell B. Brown today.

Oklahoma law provides either life imprisonment or death in the electric chair for convictions of first degree murder.

"I don't like to anticipate action of the court on the Hamon case, but I don't believe the death penalty will be asked," said Brown. "Public opinion would be against the death penalty and the law would be equally satisfied by life imprisonment if Mrs. Hamon were convicted."

PHONE CHANGES IN EFFECT

Names of 8 Exchanges Transformed on Account of Proposed Automatic Service

The cover of the new telephone directory for Boston and vicinity, distribution of which began today, carries this announcement of changes.

"In order that our patrons may become fully accustomed to the change, the style of listings in THIS directory has been arranged to conform with the requirements of the machine switching exchange which is to be placed in service NEXT YEAR.

"Changes in some exchange names are necessary in connection with the mechanical equipment, and the following changes appear in THIS directory—Bellevue to Parkway; Newton South to Centre Newton; Newton West to West Newton; and Winthrop to Ocean.

"Similarly new exchanges named Copley, Bowdoin, Blackstone and Dewey have been arranged for to take care of the party line subscribers in Back Bay, Haymarket, Richmond and Beach.

"However, until further notice ALL telephone calls should be given to the operators exactly as in the past, except that the new exchange names should be used."

CANDY IS CHEAPER IN BOSTON STORES

Candy is cheaper in many Boston stores today. After the first of the year it will probably be cheaper still.

High grade candies in packages, which sold for from $1.75 to $2 a pound before Christmas will probably sell for not more than $1.50 after New Year's Day, while package goods which have been retailing at 6 and 12 cents are expected to go on sale at a nickel and a dime.

Secretary Charles Bird of the New England Candy Manufacturers' Association said today that "retail manufacturers" who make candy for sale in their own stores have in several cases already reduced their prices from 80 to 60 cents a pound. Good candies should be bought in bulk, he said for 60 cents a pound.

"There will be a substantial reduction in all sorts of candy, but it is doubtful if this reduction will reach more than twenty-five per cent," he added.

A representative of the Liggett stores said candy prices were slashed in those stores here and in New York yesterday 8 to 33 1-3 per cent.

NEW ENGLANDERS TO EAT $1,000 MEAL

John W. Hallowell, Massachusetts chairman of the European Relief Council, and other men and women of New England, will be present tomorrow at the "million dollar" dinner to be given by General Pershing at the Hotel Commodore, New York, in aid of the starving children of Eastern and Central Europe. Herbert Hoover and others will speak. Each of the guests will have contributed $1,000 or more to the fund of $33,000,000 to feed 3,500,000 starving European children until the next harvest. The dinner will consist of beef stew, bread and cocoa, the daily ration in 17,000 food kitchens in Europe.

SNOW CLEARING ORDER GIVEN PROPERTY OWNERS

In a circular letter sent to the captains of the various police divisions in the city, Superintendent Michael H. Crowley today instructed the division commanders to enforce the law regarding property owners clearing the snow and ice from sidewalks in the vicinity of their property.

The ordinance states that no owner or tenant of an estate abutting on a sidewalk shall place or suffer to remain more than three hours between sunrise and sunset any snow upon such sidewalk or ice unless the ice is made even and covered with sand, sawdust or ashes. The penalty for disregarding this order is a $20 fine.

MAYOR VETOES RAISE FOR PROBATION OFFICER

Mayor Peters has vetoed the increase from $1,870 to $2,200 in the salary of Frank B. Shelton, probation officer of West Roxbury Court, saying an increase of $350 was out of proportion to increases given to other probation officers. He would approve an increase to $2,000, he stated.

The Mayor vetoed the renaming of Seaver Square at Ruggles, Hampshire and Cabot streets, Roxbury, to James T. Hart Square, after a deceased war veteran, on the ground that it was unwise to change a name familiar to the public for years.

MRS. AHERN'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD THURSDAY

The funeral of Mrs. Winifred H. Ahern of No. 390 Riverway, Roxbury, wife of Judge Timothy J. Ahern of the Roxbury court, will be held from the home of her mother, Mrs. Annie B. Cavanagh, No. 50 Adams street, Dorchester, Thursday morning, with a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill. Burial will be in Holyhood Cemetery.

Mrs. Ahern died at St. Margaret's Hospital, Dorchester, Monday morning. On Thursday she had become the mother of an infant daughter.

WANTS SCHOOL AGE LAW INCREASED TO 16 YEARS

Mrs. Arthur Rotch, vice-chairman of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, is presenting to the members of the Women's City Club a resume of the bills pending before the Legislature, advocated enforcement of a sixteen-year-old school age limit in place of the existing fourteen-year-old law. Mrs. Rotch claimed the school and the home was the place for children between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years.

BEVERLY PATROLMAN IS MADE A SERGEANT

Beverly, Dec. 28.—Patrolman Francis J. Minton was appointed a sergeant in the police department by Mayor McPherson. Minton stood highest in the examination. His promotion was approved by the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor.

Timilty's Illness Stirs Political Memories

NEAR DEATH

"DIAMOND JIM" TIMILTY.

"Poor Jim Timilty! He's all in—but we hope he'll recuperate," said "Fiddler" McGee, Roxbury political prophet, as he munched a sandwich in a Roxbury [illegible] grill.

McGee was speaking of "Diamond Jim" Timilty, former State Senator, head of the Democratic City Committee several years ago, founder of the old Ward 18 Democratic Club, president of Paving Department Union No. 6721, twenty-six years, and supporter of Mayor Peters in all his political contests.

Friends of Timilty in that section of Roxbury, where he held forth as a political leader for years and where today he could win a contest because of his popularity, grew [illegible] over their "coffee cups" when Timilty's name was mentioned. "He was always charitable," added McGee, nodding his head.

"Last September Timilty appeared at Young's Hotel on a business errand, a shadow of his former self. Acquaintances felt sorry for him, for he looked, as McGee said, 'all in.' That was the last seen of him in the vicinity of City Hall."

OPERATED ROXBURY CAFE.

Next came an announcement from the Mayor's office that Timilty was confined to the City Hospital following a short stay in a Rutland institution. Friday he was transferred to a private residence at Sharon, suffering from a general breakdown, brought on, it is stated, by a relapse of a cold contracted in the city election. Late reports from Sharon are that Timilty is holding his own in his battle with death.

An old Ward 18 soothsayer said that "the dullest egotistical mind often elects itself a leader among men." That was at a time when Timilty had to contend with some college bred men for political supremacy. The soothsayer's remark was directed to Timilty. The electorate took the attack as a boost for Timilty, making him leader of the ward.

Timilty first came before the public eye when he opened a thirst quenching emporium in Roxbury. His partner was Michael J. [illegible], since deceased, who represented old Ward 18, now Ward 12, in the Legislature. There the militant Democrats and Republicans gathered nightly, drank to the health of mayoralty and aldermanic candidates, and talked over the political situation.

WAS CITY LABORER.

In 1880, Timilty accepted a city job as laborer at $2 a day, later becoming a paver and sub-foreman. His interest in unionism as a safeguard for city jobs became keen at this time and he was elected head of the Paver's Union, remaining as such twenty-six years.

Losing his position in the city in 1906, Timilty became active in politics. He formed an organization in old Ward 18, and surrounded himself with all the young men of the district. He supported Tom Fay for the House, and then broke with Fay when the latter announced his candidacy for the Senate. Timilty supported John J. Butler, who was prominent in Irish societies. Butler won and Timilty was heralded far and wide as a leader.

About this time City Clerk Edward J. Donovan and John F. Fitzgerald were candidates for the Democratic nomination for Mayor. Timilty conferred with Fitzgerald and had the late Mike Daly, chairman of the old Ward 18 Democratic committee, call a meeting of the Roxbury leaders in the old Highland House on Washington street.

Attending this meeting were former Mayor Curley, representing old Ward 17, and James J. McInierney, representing the Democrats of old Ward 19. These leaders had their followers vote for Fitzgerald, who won the nomination and election. Timilty was credited with the victory in Roxbury, and was handsomely rewarded by Fitzgerald.

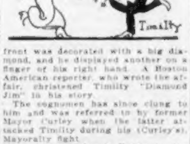
BECOMES SENATOR.

Timilty was able to make trades all over the city by means of his organization and won two elections for alderman-at-large in 1908-'09.

He began wearing diamonds about this time.

Next he took a fling in dancing at social functions run under the auspices of political organizations. He became such an adept in the terpsichorean art that he ran a dance under the direction of the James P. Timilty Club in Intercolonial Hall, Dudley street, Roxbury.

He wore a tuxedo and his shirt front was decorated with a big diamond, and he displayed another on a finger of his right hand. A Boston American reporter, who wrote the affair, christened Timilty "Diamond Jim" in his story.



The cognomen has since clung to him and was referred to by former Mayor Curley when the latter attacked Timilty during his (Curley's) Mayoralty fight.

Succeeding John J. Butler in the Senate, in 1911, Timilty had to fight hard to retain his seat for six consecutive years. He defeated "Billy" Sullivan, an able attorney; Tom Fay, Jim McInierney, an astute political leader, John J. O'Hare, well known in the legal profession, Joe McManus, labor leader and lawyer, and several others. It was during his Senate fights that Timilty broke with former Mayor Curley. The latter referred to Timilty as a "tough and tumble fighter" and quoted the bible.

REPLY TO CURLEY.

Timilty surprised Curley by coming back at him with quotations from the bible, touching on the "jawbone of an ass" and wound up by asking Curley to read chapter seven of the Book of St. Matthew. Some of the passages of that chapter read:

"Judge not, that ye may not be judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

"And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

"Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam of thine own eye, and then thou shalt see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

Several weeks later, when Senator Walsh was a candidate for governor, the then Mayor Curley escorted the latter to Timilty's club to speak. The [illegible] of party regularity impelled Curley to forget his differences with Timilty over the Bible argument. Timilty was presiding at the meeting. Curley escorted Walsh to the stage. Timilty cast his weather eye at them. Timilty said on that occasion to his supporters:

SUPPORTED LINKHAM.

"Fellow Democrats of Ward 18, Jim Curley and I are friends." Stepping over to where Curley was standing, Timilty extended his hand, saying:

"Put it there, Jim," as he clasped Curley's hand. The applause was deafening. Timilty later admitted that it reminded him of lifting a "hunk of lead when I pulled Curley's hand upward."

Timilty swung his ward two years later for Congressman Tinkham, Republican, in opposition to Francis J. Horgan, Democratic nominee. He supported Thomas J. Kenny, Good Government candidate, against Mayor Curley. When the latter was up for re-election Timilty supported Mayor Peters.

Weekly receptions were features of Timilty's club. Timilty met every voter in old Ward 18 who cared to see him. On one occasion a supporter appeared before Timilty with a scowl on his face.

WAS PHILANTHROPIC.

"What's the matter?" asked Timilty.

"Well, I gave that letter to the man you sent me to for a job and he said he didn't want to hire animals," said the man.

"How's that?" queried Timilty.

"Read the letter," said the man, flaring up as he threw it on the table.

Timilty offered his most humble apology. The letter read:

"Please put the bear to work."

In writing the letter Timilty had inadvertently neglected to write out in full the word "bearer."

34 ARRESTED IN GAMING RAID IN PEABODY

Peabody, Dec. 28.—Thirty-four prisoners taken in a police raid were in court today, charged with gaming. All were bailed. The raid, which was conducted by Chief Grady and a squad, entered the rooms of a Walnut street building, where, according to the raiders, two card games were found in progress. More than $2,000 was taken from the two tables. Charles Stathus was arrested.

Arlington Scout Troop

Seventeen boys of St. Agnes' Church, Arlington, have formed a new troop of Boy Scouts in that town. Charles Joseph Daley, Jr., has been made scoutmaster. The troop committee is composed of George Ahearn, Edward A. Geary and John A. Colbert.

MODERN TRILB WON VICTIMS

Mrs. Ruickholdt, Who Said She Was Hypnotized, Impressed Those She Robbed

Boston police were today following with keen interest developments in the case of Mrs. Ruth Ruickholdt, the "modern Trilby," who amused the New York authorities by her tale of a "tall, dark man" who kept her under hypnotic power and impelled her to steal.

Persons remembering her when she posed here as an heiress and philanthropist never heard her mention any such Svengali-like person as she now says has been her evil genius.

Mrs. Ruickholdt, wife of Dr. Charles A. Ruickholdt, a prosperous physician of Chapel street, New Haven, was arrested in New York on complaint of a New London jeweler.

As a result of the publicity given the case other victims of the suave, handsome matron began making complaints against her.

Chief among such complainants was Franz Burgstaller, manager of a Boston music store, who charges Mrs. Ruickholdt with the larceny of a violin and bow worth $410.

Mr. Burgstaller is understood to have told the police that Mrs. Ruickholdt impressed him as anything but a weak minded woman likely to be in the power of a hypnotic impostor.

He is said to have stated she was one of the coolest and most self-assured women he ever met, gave him a good address in Newton, and let him understand she had plenty of money and undoubted social position.

While the numerous New York charges will be pushed immediately, Boston authorities plan to prosecute the Burgstaller charges against Mrs. Ruickholdt, and these charges are expected to play a large part in the final disposition of the case.

Mrs. Ruickholdt took the violin from Burgstaller on trial for two days according to the music store manager. She told him it was for a niece who was musically inclined.

Two days later he received a telegram from her in Washington. She told him the instrument was satisfactory and she would shortly be in to pay for it. Two days afterward she wired him she had sent him a draft. The draft never came. Neither did Mrs. Ruickholdt.

Burgstaller describes the self-proclaimed "Trilby" as of finished manner and enough distinction to bear out her story of being an English peeress. She was in touch with a State official while she lived here, with a view of taking a girl from a State institution and educating her to be a trained nurse.

Mrs. Ruickholdt was arrested in New York by means of a decoy express package, which she thought contained a watch and ring from a New London jeweler.

OTHER COMPLAINTS.

The woman broke down when taken to the station. Later she was confronted with Miss Charlotte Sharpe of Providence, another complainant. Miss Sharpe charged that Mrs. Ruickholdt [illegible] to a telegram appealing to Dr. T. Sharpe of Darien, Ct., for funds. She got $1,200.

Miss Sharpe told the New York police that she had known Mrs. Ruickholdt for a long time. The latter's maiden name was Ruth Champlin, and she was born in Lyme, Ct.

When the deluge of complaints against the physician's wife began to pour in the police were kept busy keeping them separate. As Mrs. E. L. Porter, it is charged she registered at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York and collected about $2,000 by representing herself as other women.

J. C. Houston, a Mt. Vernon, N. Y., jeweler, charged her with the theft of property worth $250. George Bell, a New York jeweler, puts his loss at $811; Harry C. Brewer of Brooklyn says she posed as his sister and by an urgent telegram induced him to wire her $200, and got $15 from his mother by employment of a similar ruse.

ADVERTISING COURSE OFFERED BY PILGRIMS

Advance courses in advertising are announced as a part of the 1921 program of the Pilgrim Publicity Association to be given at the association's headquarters, No. 257 Washington street, on Tuesday evenings, beginning January 4. The courses consist of seven advance conferences, under the heads "Product Analysis," "Market Analysis," "Developing Sales Plan," "Developing Advertising Plan," "Selling Sales Plan," "Correspondence Department" and "Handling Results of Advertising," alternated with seven preparatory conferences.

The charges for the course, $6 for each or $10 for both, are to cover necessary expenses, the lecturers giving their services. Men prominent in advertising circles will be the speakers. Among them George C. Frolich, president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association.

The advance conference will be under the direction of Henry Kuhns, vice-president of the Pilgrim Publicity Association; and the preparatory courses under the supervision of Professor Daniel Starch of the Harvard University School of Business Administration. The first response to the announcement was a check for $140 from a prominent manufacturing concern, to pay for a complete course for fourteen of its employes.

BOSTON LUMBER PRICES HAVE STARTED TO DROP

Better grades of hardwood lumber have dropped 30 per cent from peak prices and cheaper grades have dropped in price, a member of the prominent Boston lumber firm states today. As a result, it is said, inquiries as to building costs are increasing.

DR. VAN DYKE'S DAUGHTER WEDS SPRINGFIELD MAN

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 28.—Miss Paula Van Dyke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Van Dyke, and Henry Chapin of Springfield, Mass., were married here by Rev. Tertius Van Dyke, brother of the bride. Chapin is on the staff of the New York Evening Post. He is a Princeton graduate.

TWO FAVORITES IN $5,000 MOVIE PLAYER IDENTITY TEST TODAY

LOOK FOR TWO NEW PHOTOS ON THE PICTURE PAGE

The favorite players whose likenesses are shown on the Picture Page today, in the Boston American-Boston Sunday Advertiser $5,000 Movie Identification Test, are both "veterans" of the screen, although the young man is said to be in his very early twenties. He is a native of Canada, started out with a name as common as Jones, Brown or Robinson, and now is known this wide world over by a name as famous as Foch, Dempsey or Caruso.

Is there anybody among the thousands who are taking part in this Test who does not recognize the young man?

Apparently not!

RACE IS STILL YOUNG.

How about the lady? We saw her many yeaars ago in an early Vitagraph release called "My Official Wife," and, not so long ago, in "The Forbidden Woman." One of the brunette beauties of the Shadowland, with dark hair and dark eyes.

Know her, too?

Well, well, WELL! but it is going to be hard to put over a "sticker" before THIS audience!

However, the race is young. We have fifty-one days to go, friends, before the Movie Test Editor and his assistants wade into thousands upon thousands of bundles of identifications and, having found those with the largest percentage of correct answers, say the word which will release the following awards:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	200
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	100
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH..	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH ..	550
TOTAL	$5,000

WHAT YOU MUST DO.

The above awards are to be paid by the Boston American, in association with the Boston Sunday Advertiser, to those who really KNOW the men and women of the movies. All you have to do is write the correct name of the player under one hundred and twenty pictures, as they are shown in one of the two newspapers or printed in leaflets distributed at more than three hundred picture theatres, and preserve these answers until the end of the Test. Nothing else is asked or required. There is positively no fee of any kind.

In every playhouse on the list of co-operating theatres, which appears herewith, there were distributed yesterday hundreds of four-page circulars with ALL the Test pictures down to date. These circulars afforded what may prove to be the final opportunity for late-comers to step into the Test on equal terms with those who have been marching along with it from the beginning.

ONLY PURPOSE OF TEST.

The only purpose of this Test is to ascertain how well the men, women, boys and girls of New England know the famous folk of the cinemas. The plan of the Test is to print daily, for sixty days, the pictures of two well-known players. Candidates for the 219 awards are asked to identify these pictures.

One of the best ways to earn the First Award of $1,000, or one of the lesser awards—all will be paid in cash, by the way—is to make an earnest study of motion pictures in one of the co-operating theatres. In addition to distributing Test literature—by means of which you can take part in the Test even though you do not see one of the co-operating newspapers regularly—these theatres flash the Test pictures on the screen at every performance.

KEEP UP-TO-DATE.

Keep in touch with the movies, which is another way of saying keep up to date. If the identity of an occasional picture puzzles you,—and take our word for it, we expect to make those who take these awards work for them—make that particular picture your very special business until you have the correct name for it.

Look the awards over. Aim at the First of them. Earn one of them!

PLEASE study the Rules and send in nothing until the end of the Test.

Rules of Movie Actor Test

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Moving Picture Players' Identification Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by these two newspapers to their readers who submit the largest percentage of correct identifications to the 120 pictures to be published in these two newspapers.

All employes of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and their families, and all moving picture players and persons connected with the moving picture industry are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The Test will consist of 120 pictures of favorite moving picture players, to be printed, two each day, in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, first picture Sunday, December 19, 1920.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which shall be run by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this Test.

ONE IDENTIFICATION ONLY.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each set must contain only ONE identification to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award, and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every identification must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser or on a page of some book form by itself, accompanied either by the picture furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each identification blank.

Do not send your identification in "list" form, i. e., do not write identifications under one another on a piece of paper.

In case there are no complete sets of correct identifications awards will be given to the persons submitting the largest percentage of correct identifications.

In case of a tie awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy in spelling, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their identifications before the end of the Test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your identifications from day to day and at the end of the Test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time.

HOLD SLIPS UNTIL END.

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first identifications sent in after the Test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All identifications must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Test Headquarters, at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit, which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing identifications must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all identifications will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first class matter. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of identifications on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered, as far as possible, through the columns of the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such reply, or they may phone Main 5180, or call in person.

The Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that may be deemed necessary for fairly and properly conducting the test, and the decision of the Boston American Movie Test Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions now made or to be made.

Theatres Co-operating in Test

There are 324 popular New England motion picture theatres in which you can take part in the $5,000 Movie Player Identification Test quite as well as if you see the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser regularly for the 60 days of this experiment.

In Boston, alone, the number of co-operating theatres is 48, while in and around the Metropolitan District they number fully one hundred.

In order not to miss a single day we would respectfully suggest the wisdom of placing an order with your regular newsdealer, for at least the period of the Test, telling him that you want not only the Boston American but the Boston Sunday Advertiser. BUT THIS WILL NOT BE NECESSARY IF YOU WILL BE SURE TO VISIT ONE OF THESE THEATRES REGULARLY.

Identifications sent in at the end of the Test may consist of (1) pictures cut from the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or (2) Identification Slips distributed in one of these theatres, or (3) in part of pictures clipped from these newspapers AND in part of theatre identification Slips.

In other words, you may send in ten newspaper slips (in all, twenty Test Pictures) and fifty theatre Identification Slips (one hundred pictures) and stand as good an opportunity as your friend whose sixty slips are cut from one of the two newspapers which are associated for the purpose of the Test.

ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF USING BAD CHECKS

Jay H. VanVechten, aged nineteen, of Stamford, Ct., was arrested on an indictment warrant by Inspectors Finn, Haggerty and Dorsey of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation charged with larceny on August 25, of $75 from the Back Bay National Bank by means of a worthless check. He is also charged with defrauding the Hotel Touraine, where he made his home while in Boston, of $79.60 on September 10.

$10,000 FOR MEDICAL CARE OF PRISONERS

An increased appropriation from $6,000 to $10,000 was provided by the City Council for medical attendance at the police stations and city prison for prisoners or persons detained who show signs of illness. The request was made of the council by Chief Justice Bolster.

TO VOTE ON 'ONE BIG UNION'

Wool Sorters of Lawrence to Act on Plan of Labor Leader

Lawrence, Dec. 28.—Members of the Wool Sorters' Union will vote Monday upon the suggestion made by Thomas F. McMahon, first vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, that all mill employes of Lawrence unite with the national organization in the fight against additional wage cuts.

At a meeting of the Sorters' Union, McMahon said that there is a disposition on the part of mill operators to modify the 22½ per cent. reduction in wages where individual conditions warranted.

He said that a drive to enroll all of the 35,000 mill workers in Lawrence in the United Textile Workers would be started at once.

TWO ALARMS FOR SOUTH END FIRE

A fire which started in the shop of the J. C. Fraser & Sons Co., carpenters and builders, in the rear of No. 1215 Washington street, South End, caused an estimated damage of $3,000. Two alarms were sounded.

7 BILLION LOSS IN RUSSIAN TRADE

Senator France Estimates Price U. S. Will Pay by Recall of Martens

Washington, Dec. 28.—The Russian Soviet government is exceedingly bitter toward the United States and following the recall of Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, its ambassador, will cut off trade estimated at seven billion dollars within the next few years, according to Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland.

Before leaving, Mr. Martens is under instructions to cancel all orders for commodities placed in this country. He does not expect to leave the United States until after January 3, when he will be in Washington.

After confirming the recall in a conversation over the phone with Mr. Martens, who is now in New York, Senator France made the following statement:

By JOSEPH I. FRANCE,

United States Senator from Maryland.

Information has been received that the de facto government of Russia has ordered the return to that country of L. C. A. K. Martens, and a cessation of efforts on his part to establish trade relationships with the United States.

It is apparent that the Russians have abandoned hopes of establishing with us, in the near future, those trade relationships which already some months since they have established with Great Britain.

Our workers, manufacturers, farmers and business men are beginning to taste the bitter fruits of our ill-considered and unwise policy towards Russia.

BRITISH POLICY SCENTED.

When Mr. Martens leaves the country, the Russian people will be without a representative here, while their representatives in Great Britain have been recognized and most profitable orders for immense quantities of goods are being placed.

I shall not go so far as to say that the policy of our government toward Russia has been dictated by the British, for the furtherence of British trade and interests, but we do know that it has been most advantageous to British interests.

On the theory that the United States and Russia should be friends and associates, I introduced last February a resolution providing for the establishment of more friendly relations with Russia, for the removal of barriers to trade, and expressing our desire to co-operate with the Russian people in assisting them to establish stable institutions. So far I have been unable to secure favorable action upon this resolution, but there is now a widespread sentiment in favor of its passage.

RUSSIA NEEDS OUR HELP.

The present communistic institutions of Russia are but a passing phase of the revolution, and a phase which the Russian might have escaped had we offered them our sympathetic assistance toward a more rational republic modelled more after our own.

I have believed that the opening up of trade with Russia would tend to stabilize and nationalize Russian institutions and to bring them into conformity with those of the nations with which Russia would trade.

This view is shared by Professor Jacques Magnite, the noted Russian economist and government statistician for Siberia. He believes that the re-establishment of trade with America would do more toward the re-establishment of sound economic theories and conditions in Russia that can be well realized.

The figures which record the vast resources of Russia and her need for all kind of manufactured articles such as we might supply are stupendous.

The dearth of manufactured articles is so great and the purchasing power of the Soviet government so huge that the capacity of the Russian market to absorb goods is beyond anything we have imagined. They need at once locomotives, cars and rails, tires, springs and all manner of equipment for their railways. They require huge quantities of agricultural implements and supplies, tractors, motor trucks, leather goods, including probably at least five millions of pairs of shoes.

They probably need at once $50,000,000 worth of foodstuffs, $20,000,000 worth of textiles, and a million bales of cotton for immediate use.

PRINCESS

Anastasia, of Greece, formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds, of New York, who has been granted royal status in right of her marriage to Prince Christopher of the Greek reigning family.

Athens, Dec. 28.—Princess Anastasie, who was Mrs. William B. Leeds before her marriage to Prince Christopher, has been given the status of noble birth despite the fact that she was an American commoner before her entrance into the Greek royal family.

Constantine himself explained that he will recognize the Princess as Greek nobility, but not Mme. Manos, the widow of former King Alexander. Just how this ruling will please the Greeks of court circles is problematical, for Anastasie is even a foreigner, while Mme. Manos is Hellenic by birth.

DANIELS URGES BIG U. S. NAVY

Must Play Second Fiddle to No Other Nation, He Asserts

Washington, Dec. 28.—The United States navy must not "play second fiddle" to that of any other nation, said Secretary of the Navy Daniels in discussing disarmament by the great powers.

"The impression prevails, as I see by several published statements, that the naval estimates this year provide for three additional battleships, one battle cruiser and sixty-eight other ships," said Mr. Daniels. "This is not correct. The estimates make provision for one airplane carrier and several small cruisers and gunboats.

"The suggestion of another large program was contingent entirely on the ground that there would be no association of nations and no agreement to limit armament. If there is no League of Nations and no association of nations then their ought to be a conference of all nations solely on the question of armament along the lines of the provisions of the naval bill of 1916, which provided for a three year program.

"The United States should have a bigger navy than any other nation unless there is an association of all nations which will agree to disarmament. The United States is not willing to play second fiddle to anybody.

"I advocated sinking the German fleet in midocean as an object lesson to all the world that it is unhealthy to build great armaments for purposes of conquest."

BRITISH ENVOY EXPLAINS CABLE CENSOR "BREAK"

Washington, Dec. 28.—R. Leslie Craigie, first secretary of the British embassy, called at the State Department and discussed the alleged breach of courtesy by the British embassy in sending a letter to a Senate committee direct, denying that Great Britain censors cables for the United States. The State Department refused to discuss Craigie's visit. It is understood, however, that when Ambassador Geddes recovers from his illness he will make explanation to the State Department. Department officials let it become known that they do not credit reports of a British censorship.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR RADCLIFFE FUND

Three million dollars is needed by Radcliffe College, one million for new buildings, one million for salaries increases and a million for general endowment, according to the statement made to 100 former students by E. BEVERLY MAN IS COX SECRETARY

Governor-Elect Reappoints Stevens as Adjutant-General and Names Staff

Former Mayor Herman A. McDonald of Beverly has been appointed secretary to Governor-elect Channing H. Cox. The assistant secretary is to be Charles M. Stiller of Roxbury, who served as a page under Cox, when the latter was Speaker of the House.

Governor-elect Cox has also reappointed Brigadier-General Jesse F. Stevens as adjutant-general. Personal aides on the Governor's staff will include: Captain John S. Barrows and Captain Walter F. Tobey of Boston. Aides from National Guard units are: Major William H. Blanchard of Brookline, Medical Corps; Major Edward J. Sampson of Boston, Quartermaster Corps; Captain James H. Rivers of Westfield, Second Infantry; Captain Francis X. Phelan of Roxbury, Ninth Infantry; Captain Warren S. Keith of Brockton, First Field Artillery; Captain Philip L. Brown of Newton, First Separate Squadron Cavalry; Captain Robert P. Holmes of Brookline, First Engineers, and Captain Albert F. Walker of Winthrop, Quartermaster Corps.

Mr MacDonald, the secretary to the new Governor, is a lawyer with offices in Salem, and is a World War veteran. He served with the 26th and [illegible] Divisions, on the Soissons front, being advanced from the rank of second lieutenant to that of captain.

RELATIVES PLAN FIGHT ON WILL

14 Grandnieces and Grandnephews to Wage Legal Battle for $500,000 Estate.

Taunton, Dec. 28.—A bitter legal contest, rivalling in interest the famous Sylvia Ann Howland case, was predicted when the will of Anton-Lial Sylvia, wealthy New Bedford ship chandler, was filed here.

The will, disposing of an estate estimated at $500,000, gives the bulk of the property to a stepson, John W. Frazier, overlooking entirely ten nephews and nieces, with fourteen grandnephews and grandnieces.

The will was filed in the office of the register of probate by Joseph T. Kenny of New Bedford, who is named as co-executor with Frederick S. Fuller. Appearances for various of the heirs-at-law have been filed by Joseph S. Noyes of Providence, John H. Sullivan and Frank E. Knowles of Taunton.

On the death of Frazier the will provides that the property shall go to his children and the children of Joseph Anthony Frazier, another stepson.

The deceased's next of kin are scattered from New Bedford, Fall River and Dartmouth, to California and the Azores, but an attempt is being made to get them all together, it was stated.

Sylvia established a ship chandlery in the days when New Bedford was a famous whaling port, with shipping from all parts of the world putting in there. Mr Sylvia controlled a large proportion of the trade vessels plying between New Bedford, the Azores and Western Islands, and amassed his fortune in this pursuit.

The will makes bequests of about $30,000 and creates trusts for approximately $12,000 more.

COUNCIL WANTS FIN. COM. TO HIRE HUB EXPERTS

Chairman Michael H. Sullivan of the Finance Commission will have to explain what pension experts are going to get that $9,000 requested for a study of the pension system in relation to city employes before the City Council votes the money.

City councillors said they would not vote the money if it is to be turned over to New York experts, believing that Boston has men just as capable, and wanting to encourage the "trade at home" movement. In the past, they declared, they have been disgusted by noting the rush for New Yorkers when any study of this kind was undertaken.

FORMER GLOUCESTER PASTOR IS DEAD

Gloucester, Dec. 28.—The Rev. Dr Levi M. Powers, formerly pastor of the Independent Christian (Universalist) Church of this city, is dead in Washington, according to a message received here. Before coming to this city in 1912 he filled pulpits in Somerville, Buffalo and Haverhill, accepting a call to Washington in 1918. Dr Powers was born in Newry, Maine, in 1864.

MAYOR SULLIVAN ILL AT WORCESTER HOME

Worcester, Dec. 28.—Mayor Peter F. Sullivan is confined to his home at No. 124 Vernon street with a hard cold, and physicians say it will be several days before he is out. Mayor Sullivan helped in the MacSwiney reception Sunday, allowing his enthusiasm to overrule the doctor's advice to stay at home.

RECORDS BROKEN AT POULTRY EXHIBITION

Record-breaking entries of fowl, rabbits and pigeons marked the opening of the Boston Poultry Show at Mechanics Building today. General Clarence R. Edwards entered some of his prize hens, raised on his farm at Westwood. R. M. Saltonstall, Isaac Thomas, Miss Margaret Mahoney and T. N. Hazlett are among the turkey exhibitors.

DITRICHSTEIN SCORES IN NEW PLAY

By FRED J. McISAAC,
Dramatic Editor.

Ditrichstein does not always bring us dramatic masterpieces, but he never fails to have an unusual and picturesque entertainment.

This time he is impersonating no great pianist, operatic baritone, or matinee idol as in his recent successes. Neither is he playing amorous old gentlemen.

"The Purple Mask" is a daredevil sort of entertainment, a Count of Monte Cristo affair.

Its hero is a mysterious royalist in the days of Napoleon's consulate, a man who wears a purple mask to perform prodigies of valor and enterprise, who flouts the secret police of Napoleon and never loses a trick.

There is a thrilling and amusing rivalry between him and Brisquet, a detective, and their clashes fill five eventful acts.

Surprise follows surprise; one ingenious device succeeds another, and the audience is in turn mystified and amused.

Deitrichstein is as successful as a swashbuckler as in any other role. His impersonations of Brisquet were excellent pieces of acting, and his bland manner of overpowering his antagonist was particularly delightful.

As Brisquet, Albert Burns did some admirable acting and one of his impersonations was so ingenious as to deceive everybody in the audience who was not in the secret.

Aside from these two clever gentlemen the company is not particularly remarkable and none of the female roles was well taken.

"The Purple Mask" is good fun. It has no mission and no moral.

GORDON'S OLD SOUTH—In "Curtain" her latest big photoplay, charming Katherine MacDonald has secured one of the most attractive vehicles of her career. A story of the stage, it tells a pretty romance of a popular actress, who gives up her career to wed the man of her choice. Later she discovers his infidelity and returns to her profession. How she works out her problem and eventually finds happiness furnishes one of the most delightful stories the screen has produced in a long time.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE—"Friendly Enemies," A. H. Wood's great comedy triumph, and the only American enthusiastically endorsed by two Presidents and a King, is the attraction for the current week at the popular Somerville Theatre. Its story is of tense appeal and the action of the play travels along at a rapid gait, while the dialogue has a snap and appeal that wins everyone.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM—Quite in keeping with the merry holiday spirit was the offering at the Malden Auditorium, where the Temple Stock Company presented the three-act farce, "Scrambled Wives." Hilarious fun and humorous complexities follow each other so fast that the audience was in a constant state of laughter throughout the performance.

UPHAM'S CORNER STRAND—Nazimova repeated her former screen triumphs when she appeared yesterday at Gordon's Upham's Corner Strand Theatre in her newest photodrama, "Billions." In many respects it is the best thing Nazimova has ever done.

COLUMBIA THEATRE—At Loew's Columbia Theatre yesterday the bill was headed by four acts of vaudeville with sparkling bits of comedy, songs and dancing numbers. The photoplay attractions included Roy Stewart, in "The Lone Hand," and Dorothy Bernard, in "The Accomplice."

MODERN AND BEACON—The Modern and Beacon Theatres are presenting an unusually strong bill this week, consisting of Viola Dana in her latest production, "Cinderella's Twin," and Constance Binney in a Realart production, "Something Different."

BIG REVUE IS A HIT AT SHUBERT

The Winter Garden's eighth annual revue, "The Passing Show of 1919," in two acts and many scenes, opened last evening its stay at the Shubert Theatre. It was received by a large and enthusiastic audience, with much applause and great laughter.

To describe this Winter Garden Show, in one little notice, would be a task like telling the history of the world in a column. When it is said that history all the way from King Solomon to the Ghetto of New York, came in for its travesty and its costuming and its quip and jest, one small portion of the show is mentioned.

If, as a general comment, the critical spectator should remark that it is too bad that, always, the broadest of "comedy" gets the loudest laughs, he would be over critical. For, in the Passing Show, the drunk may display his drunkenness to the point of the displeasing, yet, apparently, nobody is displeased. The "comedy" is approved; it is good in the eyes of those who have gone to view.

Certain players stood out in the great melange as most pleasing, the Hairy Sisters, four charming singers, giving much pleasure. Hazell Cox, as the Queen of Sheba, was a very slangy, nudging queen, as she was intended to be, of course; handsome, yet, sometimes, doesn't the fair lady smile just a wee bit one sided? William Prince, as the youth who follows the roads of destiny, was handsome and effective. One little lady, radiantly beautiful, might have been seen further, with pleasure. She was Tilly Barton, of the goldest of gold hair and a smile sweet, if, perhaps, a trifle conscious of her great beauty. She was exquisite in the song, "Mischief in Your Eyes."

Lou Hascall, as Ignatz, also provided broad fun, and was received with joy and encores.

To single out the many popular song hits would be as great a task as to single out all the popular players. "Tumble Inn," "Road of Destiny and "Dream Florence," were three. Between the acts, last evening, there was singing by the audience and a "party" for the Pilgrim Publicity Association after the final curtain.

ORPHEUM THEATRE—Clean and wholesome vaudeville, followed by a captivating photoplay, comprises the program for the initial half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. "Sweeties" proved to be a melodious farce, well cast. Other acts on the bill introduced E. J. Moore, the gabby trickster; Helene Vincent, in song stories; Kennedy and Cramer, in a musical skit, and Little Pipplfax, vaudeville's funniest clown. Louise Huff, in "The Dangerous Paradise," assumes the dignities of a matron, having borrowed a husband for the time being, but finds she has less freedom than in the days of her single blessedness.

PARK THEATRE—For a special holiday attraction the Park Theatre offers William Faversham in a big Selznick super-production, "The Sin That Was His." Gladys Walton is also appearing in a brand new offering, "Risky Business." A comedy and a news weekly complete the bill. bill.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA—Lionel Barrymore has without a doubt made his finest performance for the silent drama in "The Devil's Garden," which opened at Gordon's Scollay Square Theatre last night and held the audience enthralled. That Lionel Barrymore is the most versatile of the illustrious Barrymore-Drew family is demonstrated by his acting in this remarkable photoplay, which ies based on the well known work of W. B. Maxwell.

NATIONAL THEATRE — The National Theatre reopened its doors on Christmas Day, having once again resumed its original policy of vaudeville and selected photoplay attractions. For the initial half of this week the program includes a splendid array of clever vaudeville artists, being recognized favorites on the B. F. Keith circuit, and with an abundance of singing, chatter, comedy and dancing.

Plays That Remain

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—George M. Cohan's dramatic production, "The Acquittal," began its concluding week at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening. This attraction has proved one of the most popular shows the present season has given Boston theatregoers.

COLONIAL THEATRE—The second week of the engagement of "Apple Blossoms," the Kreisler-Jacobi-Le Barron operatta, began last night at the Colonial Theatre.

GLOBE THEATRE—"Erminie" is about to embark on its voyage to New York and on Saturday evening, Francis Wilson, De Wolf Hopper and the star cast will bid farewell to Boston theatregoers who have gloried in the joys of the new and wondrous "Erminie."

TREMONT TEMPLE—During this joyous season there could not possibly be a more fitting entertainment for Boston than D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," now entering its fifteenth week at the Tremont Temple. Here can be seen all the glories of New England life and scene intensified with the beauties of a story of sacrifice and love.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE—Grant Mitchell is now in the final week of his Boston engagement at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre, where he has entertained capacity audiences with his sprightly comedy, "The Champion."

Coming Events

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE—Booth Tarkington's comedy, "Clarence," will be the attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre next Monday. Through its popularity in New York and other cities this production has been long awaited and is sure to arouse particular interest.

GLOBE THEATRE—The seat sale for William Moore Patch's latest musical production, with the alluring title, "It's Up to You," opened this morning at the box office of the Globe Theatre, where this enchanting girl-comedy will begin an indefinite engagement in this city next Monday evening.

PARK SUARE THEATRE — The seat sale opens today at Selwyn's Park Square Theatre for William Courtenay and Lola Fisher in "Honors Are Even," the new comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue, coming here next Monday night.

Mrs. Di Pesa's Concert

At Jordan Hall, tonight, Mrs. Alfred Di Pesa, formerly of the Boston Grand Opera Company, will conduct a concert, the proceeds of which will be donated to the fund for the relief of the Italian sailors' war orphans.

ITCHY ECZEMA ON BABY'S FACE

Like A Rash. Face Very Disfigured. Cuticura Heals.

"My baby had eczema on her cheeks and she began to scratch her face so much I had to make her wear mittens so she couldn't make her cheeks bleed. The eczema broke out like a rash, and it itched so much she was always cross and fretful. She couldn't sleep nights and her face was very much disfigured.

"MAYTIME" IS WELCOMED ONCE MORE

"Maytime," a romance of youth, interspersed with a dash of comedy, and catchy, musical numbers, opened a return engagement in this city before a large and appreciative audience, at the Boston Opera House, last night. Practically the same cast which pleased Boston theatregoers last season is appearing in the present engagement.

Eileen Van Biene, Worthe Faulkner and Otis Sheridan, in the leading roles, were ably supported by Senorita Pepita Granados, the celebrated Spanish dancer, Ruth Thorp, Iseth Munro, Marguerite McNulty, Marie Pettes, Amy Leicester, and the dancing girls in frocks of four generations.

The play itself, staged in four acts, was interesting to a marked degree. The romantic parts taken by Miss Van Biene and Mr. Faulkner, in which they contributed to the musical features, were well received, as was the comedy presented by Otis Sheridan, who was in his usual good form.

Senorita Granados pleased with several Spanish dances, and Signor Giordanio's musical numbers were well received.

Several musical numbers included "In Our Little Home, Sweet Home," "Gypsy Song," "Will You Remember?" "Jump Jim Crow," "Road to Paradise," "Dancing Will Keep You Young," and "Only One Girl For Me."

Reviews Tomorrow of Three Plays

The following plays now appearing at Boston playhouses will be reviewed in tomorrow's Boston American: Frances Starr in "One," at the Tremont; Alma Tell, Henry Hull and George Marion in "When We Are Young," at the Wilbur, and Eddie Cantor in "The Midnight Rounders" at the Majestic.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA—Wesley Barry's debut on the screen as a star in "Dinty," which opened an engagement at the Gordon's Olympia last night, is the crowning achievement of the freckle faced youngster's meteoric career and a triumph for that wizard of the silent drama, Marshall Neilan, who created and produced this remarkable play.

"Alice in Wonderland"

An entertainment typifying the holiday season for the "kiddies" began a week's engagement in Loring Hall of Tremont Temple yesterday morning. It is the screen version of "Alice in Wonderland" and has gained great favor throughout the country as an entertaining amusement for "grown-ups" as well as the "kiddies." The presentation in Boston is under the auspices of Simmons College and the patronesses are the Boston alumnae of the college. The hours of projection are from 11 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. There are no evening performances.

ADVERTISING MANAGER TO GIVE SPECIAL COURSE

William H. McLead, advertising manager of William Filene's Sons Company, will give a fifteen-week course in "Retail Store Advertising" at the College of Business Administration of Boston University, beginning January 21. The course will treat of the organization of the retail store and its advertising department, the selection of advertising media, copy, layouts, dummies, correction, illustrations, special sales, records of results, merchandising policies, space and type sizes, frequency of insertion, buying habits and many other subjects.

Pint Dessert Mold—Style—E

Fruit Desserts
with real fruit in them—bottled

Jiffy-Jell is a real-fruit dessert. A condensed fruit juice in bottles comes within the package.

We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it. So you get real fruit in plenty—not a mere fruit taste. That is how it differs from the old-time quick desserts.

It is rich in fruit. We use, for instance, half a pineapple to flavor one dessert.

Jiffy-Jell comes ready-sweetened, and acidulated with a real fruit acid. Simply add boiling water, as directed on package, then the flavor from the vial, and let cool. A package serves six in mold form, or 12 if you whip the jell. All for 15 cents. The fruit alone would often cost you more.

Millions now enjoy it. Try it once and you will never again serve the old-time jells.

10 Flavors in Glass Vials
Mint Lime Cherry Raspberry
Loganberry Strawberry Pineapple
Orange Lemon Coffee
A bottle in each package

We pay 30c
to let you try these two desserts. See offer below. Ask us for an order on your store.

Also Jiffy-Pie

Real lemon pie also comes in like form. The package contains everything necessary—sugar, egg yolk, powdered milk, corn starch and tapioca. The lemon essence—derived from lemon peel—comes in liquid form in a bottle.

Simply add water, as directed on package, cook a little and fill your pie. No cook, at any cost in time and trouble, could make a better lemon pie.

Also Jiffy Chocolate Pie complete—a perfect pie. Use for pudding too, and for cake filling.

Two Desserts Free

Jiffy Desserts best tell their own story. So we offer to buy you a package of each—Jiffy-Jell and Jiffy-Pie. They will cost us 30 cents, but we will pay your grocer just to let you know these dainties. Mail us the coupon and we will send you an order good at any store. But we only send one order to a family, of course. Accept this offer now.

NATIONAL BOXING BODY PLANS TO ABOLISH HUGE PURSES

TO SETTLE SPORT IN COUNTRY

Co-Operation Between State Boards and Banning of Movies in Prospect

New York, Dec. 28.—Formation of a national body to govern and control professional boxing will be undertaken in this city next month. Delegates appointed by the Governors of eighteen States will convene at the headquarters of the International Sporting Club on January 10, 11 and 12.

During the three-day conference the foundation for a national organization will be laid and rules and regulations for the standardization of boxing throughout the United States established.

The new association, which will absorb the army, navy and civilian board of boxing control of which it is really a development, will be formed by carefully selected and officially appointed delegates from the following States: New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Connecticut, Colorado, Wisconsin, Montana, Minnesota, Oregon, West Virginia, Louisiana, Washington, Florida, Tennessee and Oklahoma.

Offending Boxers to Be Barred

This group represents almost all of the States where boxing is legalized. Boxing is permitted in several other States under what may be termed local option, but which will be represented by officially appointed delegates, who will be the ones to take the initial steps in the formation of the new national governing body.

In discussing the project William A. Gavin, managing director of the International Sporting Club, stated that it was the intention of the delegates to standardize the boxing rules for each and every State, to adopt a joint agreement to bar any delinquent or offending boxer in all States if suspended by the National Association, and to compel champions to defend their titles at reasonable fixed intervals or forfeit the title.

It is also the intention of those interested to advocate the abolition of the huge purses which have recently been offered for boxing matches as discrediting boxing, and to work for reasonable admission prices at all matches, as is the case in baseball, football and other sports of a national character.

Place Ban on Movies Of Title Battles

It is further proposed to stop the filming of boxing bouts as harmful to the sport. The new organization also will co-operate with the national boxing bodies of other nations, with the idea of having one international code for the governing of boxing, in order to make the sport clean, wholesome, humane and to elevate it to the plane enjoyed by other sports and pastimes.

A man of national reputation and an outstanding figure in sport probably will be selected for president of the body. Tex O'Rourke, at present matchmaker for the International Sporting Club, will be the secretary of the organization.

ST. JOHN'S ALUMNI TO HOLD BANQUET

The St. John's Preparatory School Alumni will hold their annual banquet at the Quincy House on Thursday night. Alumni from all over New England are expected to be present and the committee has spared no pains to make the festival one of the greatest in the history of the organization. Brother Benjamin, president of St. Xavier College, St Louis, will be the special guest of the occasion.

The St. John's Alumni also will make plans for the securing of the best available coach to take care of St. John's athletic teams in the future.

Among those already listed among the possible candidates are Louis Urban, the all-round star of Boston College, and Billy Joyce of Lynn.

HOREMANS SHOW WHY HE CHALLENGES HOPPE

New York, Decc. 28.—Edouard Horemans, the Belgian billiard expert who came to this country for a match with Willie Hoppe, the world champion, played his first public game in this country at the National Recreation Billiard Hall, Brooklyn, and defeated Joseph Neyer, 400 to 109.

Neyer is the former national amateur champion from Philadelphia. The game was at 18.2 balk line and gave the fans of the Greater City a chance to get a line on the skill of the visitor. Horemans had a high run of 99 and an average of 25. Neyer's high run was 60 and his average 7 4-15.

ROY MOORE TO BATTLE JACK SHARKEY AT GARDEN

New York, Dec. 28.—Roy Moore, the "Fighting Harp," has been substituted for his namesake, Pal Moore, as Jack Sharkey's opponent in the main event of fifteen rounds at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night. Pal Moore was taken suddenly ill in Chicago, forcing his managers to call off the engagement. This is the second scrap between Sharkey and Moore.

WOLLASTON A. A. SEVEN AFTER HOCKEY GAMES

The Wollaston A. A. will be represented again this Winter with a strong hockey club, with Ed Burkhardt as captain. Would like to hear from Arlington, Melrose, Winchester and any other strong clubs. Wollaston has one of the best outdoor rinks in New England. L. F. Alexander, No. 43 Ridgway street, Wollaston; tel. Quincy 1817-M.

BABE RUTH BACK FROM ANTILLES

King of Swat Plans Trip to Woods for a Month's Hunting

By W. S. FARNSWORTH

New York, Dec. 28.—Babe Ruth, the Swat of Swatters, hovers around this town. The "Man of Destiny" in the ball field is back from a trip to Cuba, where he showed the Cubans what it means to knock a ball speechless. At the same time Babe added much to his ever growing b. r., which made the trip more than enjoyable. The sad part of it all, according to Babe is that he only kicked out three homers.

"Liked to have hit more," he sighed, "but couldn't, so what can you do about it?"

Down in the Antilles the big, good natured player was the hero of the hour. Kids trailed him wherever he went, for tales of his prowess preceded him. And they had a good host, for the big fellow has a soft spot in his heart for the little fans. In fact, he enjoys their company more than he did his brother players and home promoters.

"A kid is a wonderful thing," he remarked, "for when they like you they let you know, and when they don't they let you know just the same."

In talking of his trip he announced he had a very enjoyable time. Played enough ball to satisfy himself and fill his contract. After his first contract, calling for $1,000 per game was executed, he received $3,000 for playing two games at Santiago.

Then he was offered a chance to play ten games at $500 per, but he declined on the grounds that $1,000 was his price, and that he really wasn't overanxious to play for he had just enough action to make him feel he needed a rest.

To Take Month's Hunting Trip

Ruth will spend the New Year holidays at Waterbury and then prepare for a hunting trip that will consume nearly a month. The Swatter always was fond of the woods, and when he was playing with Boston spent his Winters up in Maine, where he could pack his trusty gun and go out and imitate Davy Crockett. That always brought him back to the opening of the season in wonderful shape and enabled him to start training without any difficulty.

Ruth is paying no attention to the coming season. He has finished with baseball and wants to get it off his mind. He has been going steadily for close to ten months, which is all an athlete needs.

"I'll be in there next season," he concluded, "and hope to knock 'em out as I did last season. Just now, I'm all het up over my hunting trip.

"Tell the boys I wish 'em all a happy New Year." Then Babe passed out of the picture.

B. A. A., 32 YEARS YOUNG, CELEBRATES TONIGHT

The Boston Athletic Association's birthday will be celebrated at the Exeter street clubhouse tonight. Vaudeville acts in the gymnasium constitute a feature of the entertainment.

Kilonis Objects to Deadly Toe Hold

John Kilonis is kicking over the fact that the toe hold is to be permitted in his match with Louis Pergantes at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night and wants the punishing grip barred. Pergantes has refused to listen to this and insists that he has always wrestled with the hold permitted and to bar it on Thursday night would cut off one of his best assets.

"Funny how that Greek squawks whenever he feels that he cannot have things his own way," says Pergantes. "Let him take the same chances as the rest of us have to take and that is the best test of his wrestling skill. I feel sure I will beat him under any condition, but just because he wants the toe hold barred is the very reason I will insist on it."

SPORT EDITORIAL

Black and White

Wills, "the Brown Panther of New Orleans," is a big, chocolate colored fellow who can fight like fury. Dempsey, as you know, is the heavyweight champion of the world.

They are undoubtedly the best big pugilists in the world today, both at this time at the peak of their fistic form.

Some people contend that with physical conditions fairly equal a black man can always beat a white on the theory that the black is the nearer approach of the gorilla, most formidable of animals.

The contention is not borne out in ring history. Gans, Dixon, Johnson, Godfrey, Jeannette, Langford, Jackson, Turner, Blackburn, Walcott, all tremendous negro fighters, defeated white men time and again, but time and again were beaten by white men.

The thing seems to work about even. We here present an old print showing one of the first of the championship fights, between a white man and a negro, in the history of the game. It took place 110 years ago this month, near London.

In this fight, Tom Cribb beat Tom Molineaux, a black man, and, according to history, a truly great fighter, after forty desperate rounds.

Dempsey Has Hayes as Man Friday

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

Some folks call him "Jack Dempsey's Shadow"; others term him "Little Jack Dempsey," while Dempsey himself classifies him as "the best and squarest little pal of them all." The world knows him as Teddy Hayes of Milwaukee.

Everywhere that Dempsey goes, Teddy Hayes goes, too. Never conspicuous, always in the modest background, but ever alert and ready to do the wish of the king of battlers—and to save him from annoyance.

He's something of a buffer for Dempsey; the youngster who protects the champion from excessive verbal mauling by a lionizing public; the youngster who teams up with Dempsey in one of the most diplomatic "double plays" ever devised to save a sportive hero from boresome company.

Teddy Hayes is more than that. Primarily he's Jack Dempsey's secretary, dresses like a Beau Brummel and with the manners of Chesterfield.

But Hayes is not content to serve the mighty gladiator merely in the secretarial role. He acts as Dempsey's chauffeur in a pinch; officiates as his rubber; serves as a sparring partner—when Jack is minus others.

Hayes is Dempsey's timekeeper in his workouts, his companion on road stunts, his counsellor — in Jack Kearns' absence—whenever the enthusiasm of the champion might carry him to extremes in his training.

Back in 1916 began the friendship between the once-time lightweight and the man who now dominates the fistic world. Hayes, then twenty-two or so, had gone to Salt Lake for a bout. There he met Dempsey, at that time an obscure mining camp battler.

After Dempsey won the championship he went to the Pacific Coast. And among the first to greet him was Teddy Hayes, no longer a battler, but a moving picture actor.

"Maybe you'll be a star at it—may be no," Dempsey told Hayes. "But, anyway, I want you as my little lieutenant. You be my secretary, see? I've got a little more money than I used to have—and I'll meet the salary they pay you in the movies—and go it a little better."

So Hayes became Dempsey's secretary—and "Jack Dempsey's shadow."

Soon afterward Dempsey and Hayes perfected their famous "double play" which always is worked whenever folks who generally can be classed as "pests" rush up to Dempsey and monopolize his time and patience.

Dempsey, ever cordial, always kindly, never fails to shake hands with anyone who steps forward. And he never balks at exchanging a little conversation with anyone. But if the stranger persists in becoming boresome and shows determination to fasten himself upon Dempsey's company, the "double play" is started—in this fashion.

"Say, Jack," hazards Teddy, "don't forget about that appointment at twelve.

"Why didn't you tell me—why didn't you tell me?" frowns Dempsey. "Gosh we've got only fifteen minutes to get there." And then Dempsey turning to his "guest" grabs his hand, shakes it and says: "Sorry, old fellow, but I've got to be skipping along"—and away go Dempsey and his "shadow."

FORE RIVERS VS. COATS TEAM

By ART CURLY.

The Fore River eleven will travel to Pawtucket, R. I., New Year's Day to play the sturdy J. & P. Coats team, in the fourth round for the American Cup. The Rhode Islanders are the only ones who have managed to pin a defeat on the shipbuilders so far this season, and are out to duplicate the trick. The Quincy boys are going down with the determination to win and show their cocky opponents that they were badly off their form when they were defeated early in the season in a Southern N. E. League game.

The Robbins Dry Dock won the National cup replay from the Erie team 5 goals to 3, but the latter, desiring to be in style, promptly protested the game on the grounds that the field was not of regulation size. Soccer officials are about fed up on this protest stuff, and if the losing team has not got a pretty strong case they are completely out of luck.

The Robbins are due to battle the Bethlehem team in the American cup series New Year's Day and there is sure to be some fireworks, for the Pennsylvania eleven were knocked out of both cups last season by the Dry Dockers.

CHEVALIER TO MEET BIG GREEK MATMAN

Salvatore Chevalier, who gave Wladek Zbyszko such a hard battle Christmas night at the wrestling carnival in Mechanics Building, will be seen in action here again. The Frenchman is booked to meet George Ketsonares, the Greek heavyweight, in a bout preliminary to the Lewis-Gardini battle, which is being conducted by Promoter Lou Daro a week from Thursday night.

ARLINGTON HIGH TO HAVE FRESHMAN SEVEN

In addition to the varsity ice seven, which is a member of the Interscholastic Hockey League, there will be a freshman hockey team at the Arlington High School this Winter. Dr. William T. McCarty, director of athletics in the Arlington schools, has already issued a call for material for the team and he is ready to book games.

TECH CHESS MASTERS WALLOP PENN RIVALS

New York, Dec. 28.—Massachusetts Institute of Technology was victorious, three games to one, over University of Pennsylvania in a Triangular College Chess League match. The only defeat for the Boston team J. Brimberg, C. Thumin and S. Nelson. The onl ydefeat for the Boston team resulted from a default.

Football Rivals in Pasadena Workout

Pasadena, Cal., Dec. 28.—With their final training for their battle University of California and Ohio State football squads are settled in their final training for their battle at Tournament Park Saturday.

Coaches Wilce and Smith are a busy pair, but the two men who are putting the hardest licks are Trainers Bryan of California and Gurney of Ohio State. These two veterans already have their men in the best of condition and promise to send the squads on the field New Year's Day without a cripple. The workouts to date have shown that the athletes are in the pink of condition. The advance work indicates that Ohio State has the advantage of California slightly in the passing game.

The cool weather is welcomed by the Buckeyes. A squad of youngsters can come mighty close to being acclimated in a week's time, and they are in better shape than they would have been had they been compelled to take up their training work during warm weather.

PURES TUNE UP FOR BIG BOUTS

Amateur Boxers Get Together in Commercial Club Ring; Clinton Meets Scholls

By RINGSIDE

The amateur mit shakers, who are tuning up for the championships not so far distant, have the boxing calcium all to themselves this evening. The watch chasers perform at the Commercial Club quarters in Bowdoin square, and fans of the sweat and sock must trend thither if they want action. There's nothing else booked within the limits of our fair village.

There are to be a couple of special bouts as well as the customary elimination contests in the three regular classes. The extras will provide plenty of science, anyway, while there's sure to be both cleverness and much scrap in the regular run of bouts.

The new crop of simon pures hereabouts is very large and also promising, and practically all the good boys are getting in a bit advance licks to fit them for the title struggles, toward which all amateur activities are pointed.

Commercial Club Back in Old Quarters

Speaking of the Commercial Club reminds us that the organization gets going again in the home roost later in the week. Plenty of real fighting was always the rule there, and the regulars have been pining for the reopening ever since the sport became legal.

The initial card under the new order follows the old lines—evenly matched boys of real battling ability. In the main scramble, Paddy Flynn of Everett and Joey Connolly exchange thumps. While neither is a champ, both are pretty good battlers and there's none of the Christmas spirit wasted between them, either.

Larry Costello of Charlestown and Al Layne of Cambridge exchange amenities, whatever they are, in the semi-final, and there lies all the promise of another rugged battle. Luke Mullins of Cambridge and Jimmy Gardner of Quincy hook up in a six rounder, as do Duke Duffy and Johnny Shepard.

Clinton Matched With Scholls for Armory

Johnny Clinton seems to be getting a chance to show around here finally. Johnny Downs was the only one of the locals who would tackle such a stiff assignment, and the promoters have been forced to go out of town for his next enemy. Eddie Mack's sturdy protege meets Frankie Scholls of Buffalo at the Armory next week. Scholls is what you might call a tough egg, but Clinton is accustomed to that variety.

The match will be a semi-final to the Montreal-Friedman tilt, which promises to stir up plenty of argument among the admirers of the little fellows in this neck of the woods. The two big contests contain enough quarrelling to pack Mechanics Hall.

Bill Brennan Wants Another Crack at Dempsey's Title

Large Bill Brennan, who became famous by not being knocked out by Jack Dempsey in a round or so, believes he could measure the champion in another bout. At least he says he believes it. Anyhow, he would like another purse similar to the one he collected for getting flattened recently. Probably no scrapper ever got as much fame out of being knocked stiff as Thespian Bill.

Bugs Baer Says

NOT SO GOOD.

A USEFUL Xmas gift is something you can take back and exchange.

A USELESS gift is one that you needed badly but could have bought yourself for eighteen cents.

AND the real gift is one that is luxurious, expensive, and costs at least five hundred dollars and that many hints.

THE wrong gift is one you needed but didn't want, which makes the right gift one you wanted but didn't need. A gal would rather have a gnat sized diamond than an elephant sized pair of shoes. She would rather freeze in silk than keep warm in wool and go hungry in a fashionable restaurant than have a coal scuttle full of nickels in the Automat.

THE new voters might rattle around Woolworth's imported buttonhooks for 364 days in the year. But on Xmas they have their mouths all set for Tiffany's, where those South African pebbles glimmer brighter than the sun. But not quite as cheaply.

JEWELRY was considered a luxury before it became necessary. In the old days a bride was content with a fourteen karat gold bondage on her finger. It was a simple little yellow ring that looked very well with the green mark it made on the finger. Now, a gal wouldn't even consider getting engaged for less than a ring that cost less than two hundred instalments and the balance like rent.

XMAS is where the boys get a chance to eat in the one-armed sudden lunch rooms for the rest of the year. They do their shopping early, their payments late, and their eating very little, if any.

THEY say the merry day comes but once a year, but the instalment man ain't so exclusive. He's right on the job and he ain't hiding behind a set of shredded biscuit whiskers. It wouldn't be so bad if love lasted as long as the instalments. But about the forty-sixth payment a young man kinda figures that eating may be a vulgar habit, but it's a habit nevertheless.

WHEN her sweety gives her one of those dit diamonds a gal lets him perch on the sofa with her and kiss her through a layer of rouge and a shock absorbing blanket of talcum. He feels amply repaid for the diamond, but the man who makes the collections hasn't got any sofa springs in his heart.

CLINTON WINS IN SIXTH ROUND

Stops Johnny Downes After Flashy Performance at Carlyle Club Show

Johnny Clinton made good the expectations of his warmest admirers in the main bout at the Carlyle Club show, stopping Cleveland Johnny Downes in the sixth round.

Downes was on his feet at the time the referee halted the fray and was inclined to argue with the official over the latter's ruling, but, though not knocked out save in the technical sense the Boston boxer was obviously in distress and George Freeman, who was the third man in the ring, did the wise thing in stopping the contest.

To have allowed it to continue would have been to have subjected Downes to much unnecessary punishment when he no longer had a fair chance to win.

Downes Shines Only in First Round

Downes flashed in the first round, and when the men went to their corners looked like he was on the road to victory. But after that session it was Clinton all the way, points being piled up at the expense of Cleveland Johnny in rapid-fire fashion.

Nixie Searles knocked out Billy Weeks in the first round, a right-hand punch to the jaw doing the trick. Joe Lebardini had the advantage over Red Mulkern in a six-rounder, the most strenuously contested battle of the evening. Barney McAteer won over Young Donahue of Brockton in eight frames, and Freddie Williams had the better of Tony Julian in another eight-rounder.

WILLIE GREEN BOXES FORMER RING CHAMP

New York, Dec. 28.—Freddie Welsh, the former world's lightweight champion, will attempt his "come-back" in the fighting game this evening at Newark. The old title-holder will box Willie (Kid) Green twelve rounds at the Coliseum A. C. The outcome of this battle means everything to Welsh. For the past few months he has been training steadily at his health farm at Summit, N. J., to get in shape.

When Benny Leonard wrested his title away, Welsh was promised a return battle. Before the bout could be arranged Welsh entered the army and spent several years in the service. He was only discharged with honors about six months ago and then started to work himself into condition. This bout will determine the future of the former champion. If successful he will engage in a few more battles and then seek the return of his old laurels.

LAMY BROTHERS TO SHOW AT THE ARENA

Edmund Lamy, one of the greatest skaters of all time, and his brother, Ernest, both from Saranac Lake, N. Y., will appear here Saturday night in connection with the grand opening of the Boston Arena.

Ernest since he laid away his long runners for speed work has devoted himself to fancy and figure skating and also trick stunts on the runners.

Edmund and his brother will crowd all sorts of fancy stunts into their event Saturday night. Barrel jumping is a great art developed by Edmund. He can clear ten flour barrels laid side by side, which means a jump of at least twenty feet from a flying start.

RICHARDS FAVORED TO WIN THIRD NET TITLE

New York, Dec. 28.—Vincent Richards of Yonkers, champion of the junior indoors tennis division for two years, is the star of the annual national tournament in progress here at the Seventh Regiment Armory. He won his opening matches easily. Richards is favored to win the title for a third time. The boys' national indoor tournament is being played in conjunction with that of the juniors.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Opportunity Presents Itself

JENNIE'S big chance came sooner than she expected, and in a way she did not expect—and it came with unexpected complications and undreamed-of risks; yet she was ready for it when it did come.

When the participants in Mrs. Shipman's coming bazaar began to meet in that lady's big house on upper Fifth avenue, first to talk things over and then to rehearse, Jennie had opportunity for intensive study of the woman whom it was part of her great plan to win. Since the passing of that older order of grand dames who, a decade or two before, had truly ruled society with imperial might and hauteur, Mrs. Shipman more nearly approached being the leader of society than any of her contemporaries. She was more tactful, more considerate of others, than had been the great ladies of her own young womanhood. Jennie perceived that she ruled more by the good-will of her subjects than by the imposition of her might; in keeping with the political trend of her time, she was more of a democratic queen. But though her methods were different, Jennie sensed that her desire for dominance was no less than in the leaders of old. And to maintain her leadership she had to be always active, and every affair with which she was concerned had to be at least a success, if it did not actually stand above every similar enterprise. She dared not fail; at least she dared not fail often.

And yet, for all her adroit democratic imperialism, for all her pleasantly hidden determination to hold her own, Jennie perceived that she was at bottom a good-hearted and generous woman—perfectly willing so long as the main glory was hers, to give full credit to others.

Jennie, studying quietly, decided on the traits of Mrs. Shipman which offered her her best chance to win: the older woman's desire for success and continued success, and her willingness to render credit. These traits Jennie must use.

Mrs. Shipman had decided upon a program of emotional and dramatic tableaus—the "Woes of the Allies" the figures of which were to be portrayed by the younger women of society. And since she really liked a certain young Percy Farwell, and everybody thought him extremely clever, she had decided to close her program with a one-act musical comedy written and composed by him, and played by amateurs. This would lighten the end of the program and prepare the guests for the dancing which was to follow, and also put them in the right mood to buy freely at the booths which were to be the real source of revenue. All together it would be a well-rounded entertainment. And her printed programs would give only the bar titles of the various numbers, thus creating expectancy and speculation as to what each number was to be and as to the identity of the performers.

Jennie's allotted part in the program was a comparatively minor one; merely a figure in a tableau that was to be called "Daughters of Belgium"—though after the tableau had been rehearsed many times she became the stricken daughter around whom the others were grouped. But in the bustle of preparation she paid more attention to young Farwell's operetta than she did to her own act. Gloria, with that swift, possessive instinct which few ever combated, had seized upon Percy Farwell's work even while Mrs. Shipman's plans were forming; she gave time to it, she privately spent her own money, she got the prettiest girls who were otherwise engaged for her chorus, and she secured Slim Jackson as coach. Of course Gloria had the chief feminine part, with Percy Farwell himself playing the romantic lover. It really looked very good to Jennie in rehearsal, with Slim whipping it into shape. Gloria had enough assurance to be a fair actress, and she had a fair voice—altogether quite adequate for an amateur performance. Gloria plainly intended to register the personal success of the evening, and she would undoubtedly do so, for she had the superior vehicle.

Jennie could not wholly repress her bitter feelings. But then—oh, well, let Gloria have her success! Some day, however, her own great time would come.

At length the night of Mrs. Shipman's bazaar arrived. The affair was held in the big ballroom at Sherry's, the ballroom in her Fifth avenue house being altogether too small; for Mrs. Shipman was bent on making money, and tickets had been sold widely and somewhat indiscriminately in order to insure a large crowd. A temporary stage had been erected at one end of the room, with draw-curtains, and with curtained-in dressing rooms for the participants.

From the standpoint of attracting an audience the bazaar was a success from the outset. Every one of the gilded chairs was occupied and men stood packed to the very walls. Peeping between the curtains just before they parted for the beginning of the performance, Jennie had sharp surprises. Standing near [illegible]or, rather uncomfortable in evening clothes, stood Officer Casey. She caught her breath. What was he doing there? Then she relaxed partially; this was a mixed crowd, and police protection had seemed advisable—that was probably the explanation of Casey's presence.

Jennie Sees Her Judge

And then her eyes lighted on another man, a man with a luminous bald head, and she experienced a more severe shock. He seemed familiar, and yet at first she could not place him. Then suddenly she remembered. He was that judge before whom she had been tried in the Women's Night Court years before. She recalled how piercing his eyes had been, how merciless they had seemed.

She had a frantic impulse to tell Mrs. Shipman that she was suddenly indisposed and could not appear. But that impulse she quickly controlled. In the plain black costume which she wore as one of the daughters of Belgium she looked very little like her real self; and besides, so many years had passed that the judge had probably forgotten the incident of the young girl forger who had been before him and had that same night disappeared.

The program moved along smoothly. The tableaus had been well thought out and carefully rehearsed, and since they had the added value of being presented by the prettiest of society women they were well received. The last of the tableaus was Jennie's—a group of young women all in black, representing the girlhood of a devastated land, faces white and fixed with terror, and arms stretched out imploringly. When the curtain swung together there was continued applause. Not a tumult, but quite as much as Jennie had expected.

Jennie saw that Mrs. Shipman, sitting in the improvised wings, was thoroughly satisfied. Thus far all had gone as well as she had counted. It was to be Percy Farwell's little opera that was to give distinction to her program, which was to make her evening stand out above the affairs conducted by other women.

Jennie paused near Mrs. Shipman to watch the performance. Slim Jackson had hurried over from his theatre where the last curtain had fallen a few minutes before, and was giving final direction to Gloria and Farwell. Beyond the velvet curtains a small orchestra, recruited from the musicians at Slim's theatre, were beginning the brief overture. A minute or two later and the curtain parted, and the chorus danced on.

The plots of all musical comedies, in their outlines, are much the same and seem unbelievably stupid, and Percy Farwell's broke with no traditions. The chorus seemed to be friends of the heroine, though naturally it was not made clear what they were doing on the premises. They sang their appointed melody, and sang it well, then danced off. Immediately thereafter Gloria and young Farwell appeared on the stage.

The dialogue acquainted the audience with the facts that the stage was Gloria's drawing room and that Gloria was a young widow whose fortune had been tied up in a way to prevent her remarrying, by one of those wills which dead husbands are forever leaving behind them in musical comedies. Also this will had attached to her for life a maid and a butler—spies upon her happiness—both spies! But fortunately, by a trick, she had got the pair out of the house, and for once she and her lover could talk freely. Whereupon the young hero nobly declared that he did not love her for her fortune, only for herself; and besought her to forfeit her fortune and join him in penniless happiness. There was much romantic talk about this—and he sang to her, in a pleasing light barritone, about the spell of her wonderful eyes—and she sang back (a very neat melody) in a passable soprano something about if only one dwelt in love's kingdom where Cupid made all the laws. This cooing at each other was done with, she proceeded to declare that she could come to no man and be to him merely a burden—there must be some way out of the will.

Thus far all had gone excellently. Absurd as the foregoing synopsis may seem, Farwell's lines had been clever or agreeably sentimental, the music had always been adequate and in spots highly pleasing, and the audience had been in a most cordial mood. At this point in the dialogue, Gloria was supposed to have an inspired plan. But at this point Gloria had nothing at all. She began to flounder in her lines—then she lost them altogether. Young Farwell began to talk rapidly, improvising, slipping her her cue repeatedly in his discursive speech. From the wings Slim whispered her lines loud enough for her to hear. But she heard nothing. For once her self-possession failed her. She stared wildly at Farwell for a moment, then she fairly ran off into the wings. No other course was left to Farwell except to follow her, leaving an audience that blinked its eyes at an empty stage.

Slim Jackson swore one of those oaths such as he had used in the long ago down in the Pekin, but such as he had never before permitted himself in such company as this. "Draw those curtains!" he snapped.

CONTRASTS—Oh, yes, we all believe in contrasts, and we who say we just love a dark-haired girl, and we who say we just love a light-haired girl, what do we know about it? But there's one who could tell us. You see him in the car and he's sad in one picture and smiling in the next, and it's because he's found out. He's found out that dark-haired Betty, who dotes on scenery and trees and fields when she's talking to a sentimental man, plain goes to sleep as she's whirled past th panorama of Nature's marvels. No wonder the little fellow weeps. It is a disappointment. But then there's Sally—she doesn't enthuse to the sentimental man, but she does see the most amazing revelations in every tree and brook and flower. No wonder the little chap smiles.

Adventures of Ann

By Hal Coffman

CHAPTER LVII.

ANN had been with Montgomery & Co., Ltd., now for some time. She had more than made good in her position. The filing system, her first job, she had gotten running smoothly, so that Mr. Chase, the manager, called her to his desk one day and said: "Miss Sheridan, how is your stenography coming along?"

Ann in a businesslike way answered him: "Very well, I think; did you wish me to take a letter?" "Yes, I do," he answered. "In fact, several. My secretary is leaving and I must have some one to fill her place. Would you care to try for it?"

He smiled as he talked to her and continued: "You know I just asked you that to see what you would say. I have been watching you and your work, and there is no doubt in my mind that you can fill it. However, there has been a leak here in the office. I think my former secretary was mixed up in it and I have just let her go. Some of our most important business that we had been trying for in South America has been tipped off to our rival firm, and they have beaten us to the orders. Now, do you think you can keep mum about things that go on in the inside and mention them to no one?"

"Try me," was all Ann said. Mr. Chase found her so proficient and she fitted in so well and earnestly in her new position that he chuckled to himself and murmured: "Well, there are a few left that want to work instead of always powdering their noses or are out gabbing somewhere when you most want 'em."

One day, during the lunch hour, Ann came back earlier than usual, as she had a piece of work she wished to get finished. As she opened the door of Mr. Chase's office she saw Gomez, of the foreign department, just laying down some papers. They were important letters, and she remembered about the leak in the office Mr. Chase had mentioned to her. "I just wished to ask the boss something," said Gomez, smiling as he passed her. Ann said nothing as she watched him go out the door.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company.

EARLY in August, Theodora Dale went to visit her relatives in Massachusetts. During the weeks that passed between the dinner at Longue Vue and her departure from the city, she had seen Peter only in the drawing-room of her boarding house, or when he took her for an automobile drive in the cool of the evening.

She had even refused to drive with him until he assured her that he had bought his car with his own money.

"Cash that I earned myself—as my father knows," he said. "Dad was surprised when I told him how easily I made it."

He did not intimate that it had been by speculating with his allowance from his father. That was his own affair.

In spite of Peter's determination to maintain the pleasant relations with the girl he had learned to love, he was conscious of a subtle change in her attitude toward him. It was as if she were disappointed in him—yet would not hurt him by telling him so.

He wished that Mary were at home that he might explain the situation to her. Yet as he, in imagination, did this, he felt the reproach in his sister's attitude. He could almost hear her say:

"And you offered to pay a decent girl's traveling expenses and board—and did not expect her to resent it!"

He hated conventionalities. Why need an otherwise sensible girl like Theo balk at a matter of mere social form, when she was so delightfully sensible and unconventional in other directions? It was as if the mention of money made things different.

Luck at the First

"It is because I have no money of my own that I am put in a false position," he mused. "Dad means to be kind, but he makes me feel like a pauper. Then he kicks at my going into what he calls a 'wildcat scheme' to increase my income. Well, if I cannot make money in one way I can in another. As to going into business in Nelsonville—I'll be d—d if I do! Dad could easily set me up in something here in New York. But, no—it's shoes or nothing! Well, where there's a will there's a way. And just now I know the way."

The "way" in his case that Summer proved to be the race track. Like many beginners in betting, he had, for a while, remarkable luck.

"I fancy the mascot that protected you in France sticks to you here, Throckmorton," a voice said at his elbow one day at the Belmont Park race track.

Turning, Peter saw Lewis Sheldon at his side.

"Oh, good day!" Peter said coldly, moving away.

"I have been watching you," Sheldon followed him, "and you seem to have a genius for picking winners. I wish you would give me a tip."

"It's mere good luck," I guess," Throckmorton remarked nonchalantly.

He disliked Sheldon, yet was vaguely flattered at the admiration implied by the man's words. It made him feel important to be addressed as one who was on the inside in sporting matters.

"Oh, come, now, I believe that you could give me a tip if you wanted to," Sheldon insinuated. "By the way, are you alone here?"

"Yes. Why do you ask?"

"I was wondering if we might not dine this evening—going back to town together. I will be glad to have you as my guest."

But Peter declined.

"Thanks," he said, "but I have a tentative engagement for this evening."

"Oh, I see!" Sheldon smiled significantly. "I can't blame you, old man. She's a peach."

Peter colored. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Oh, nothing, nothing, my dear fellow, I assure you!" Sheldon hastened to declare. "I was only making random shots and ought not to have spoken as I did. Pardon me!

A Typical Father

"And, by the way, I received a very kind invitation from your mother and sister yesterday, suggesting that I run up to Newport a fortnight from now. I rather fancied that you might be with them."

"No," Peter rejoined stiffly. "I am in New York this Summer."

"Ah? And your father is"——

"My father is out in Nelsonville," Peter interrupted.

"Yes—so I heard. He is truly a wonderful man," Sheldon went on. "A typical American father and husband, I may add."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Just that," was the smiling reply. "He looks after business while the rest of the family profit by it.

"Until I saw you here, I rather wondered if you might possibly have gone out to the old home-town with him. But there are doubtless many attractions for you in New York—even in the Summer. Good afternoon!"

He was gone before Peter could reply. He restrained a mad impulse to follow Sheldon and demand an explanation of his innuendoes.

What did he mean by "attractions in New York?" Was he referring to Theo? Had he seen her and Peter together?

And had he intended to intimate that Peter's father worked while his son loafed?

How odious Sheldon was, to be sure! Yet Mary must have persuaded her mother to suggest that he come to Newport while she was there.

Why did Mary do such things? Peter resolved that he would write to her as soon as he could make time to do so and remind her of the kind of reputation Lewis Sheldon had.

The Need of Fresh Air

By Brice Belden M. D.

TUBERCULOSIS is always with us and discussions of the methods of fighting it are always timely. There is a widespread campaign against it, and we all know about the great centres established for its prevention and cure.

However, the importance of education in regard to the heading off of the plague at its source cannot be minimized, especially since the great campaign so rapidly advancing has not yet become comprehensive enough to handle the whole of the problem.

This means that conditions in the home and other indoor places, such as the school and factory, must be understood and watched everywhere, indoor life having been discovered to be the chief cause of the dread disease.

That the lack of fresh air is the most important factor in the spread of tuberculosis is proven by observation of those people and animals that live in the open air, and also by the results of plenty of fresh air as a cure for those who have already contracted the disease.

Among the American Indians tuberculosis was unknown until they began to live in houses, and we know that this change of habit has caused their race to become almost extinct through the ravages of this disease.

Another observation along this same line is that of monkeys in some of the zoos in this country. It has been discovered that many of the monkeys suffering from tuberculosis contracted in Winter quarters can be saved by being put out in the fresh air in the coldest part of the Winter. In one case a very sick monkey improved, although exposed to the bitterest weather, and the disease was checked in a satisfactory manner.

The best form of proof as to the influence of fresh air or lack of fresh air upon the problem of the spread of tuberculosis is in the results obtained from the placing of tuberculosis children in open air schools.

This observation naturally leads to the idea of instituting open air schools in order to prevent tuberculosis as well as to cure it after the damage has been done. Perhaps it will take many years before we come to have the combination school house and playground in the open air which made the boys of Sparta perfect specimens of health and intellect unequalled anywhere in our modern civilization.

However, we can at least understand the importance of fresh air and the menace of indoor life and keep our children out of doors as much as possible.

Marriage Hints for Girl

The doctor was giving an informal talk on physiology.

"Also," he remarked, "it has recently been found that the human body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed the girl in the blue and white blazer. "And how much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"

"Oh, the amount varies," said the doctor, smiling, "according to the girl."

"Ah!" remarked the girl. "That's why some of us make better matches than others."

II.

THEN it came to pass that Hodder carried back with him another armful of books. Those he had brought back were the Levellers of the False. These were the Builders of the True.

Hodder had known for many years that the writings of Josiah Royce and of William James had "been in the air," so to speak, and he had heard them mentioned at dinner parties by his more intellectual parishioners such as Mrs. Constable and Martha Preston. Now he was able to smile at his former attitude toward these moderns, whose perusal he had deprecated as treason to the saints! And he remembered his horror on having listened to a fellow-clergyman discuss with calmness the plan of the "Varieties of Religious Experiences." A sacrilegious dissection of the lives of these very saints! The scientific process, the theories of modern psychology applied with sang froid to the workings of God in the human soul! Science he had regarded as the proclaimed enemy of religion, and in these days of the apotheosis of science not even sacred things were spared.

Did Not Carry Authority

Now Hodder saw what the little librarian had meant by an authority restored. The impartial method of modern science had become so firmly established in the mind of mankind by education and reading that the ancient unscientific science of the Roman Empire, in which orthodox Christianity was clothed, no longer carried authority. In so far as modern science had discovered truth, religion had no quarrel with it. And if theology pretended to be the science of religion, surely it must submit to the test of the new science! The dogged clinging to the archaic speculations of apologists, saints, and schoolmen had brought religion to a low ebb indeed.

One of the most inspiring books he read was by an English clergyman of his own Church whom he had formerly looked upon as a heretic, with all that the word had once implied. It was a frank yet reverent study of the self-consciousness of Christ, submitting the life and teachings of Jesus to modern criticism and the scientific method. And the Saviour's divinity, rather than being lessened, was augmented. Hodder found it infinitely refreshing that the so-called articles of Christian belief, instead of being put first and their acceptance insisted upon, were made the climax of the investigation.

Religion, he began to perceive, was an undertaking, an attempt to find unity and harmony of the soul by adopting, after mature thought, a definite principle in life. If harmony resulted—if the principle worked, it was true. Hodder kept an open mind, but he became a pragmatist so far. Science, on the other hand, was in a sphere by herself, and need have no conflict with religion: science was not an undertaking, but an impartial investigation by close observation of facts in nature. Her object was to discover truths by these methods alone. She had her theories, indeed, but they must be submitted to rigorous tests. This from a book by Professor Perry, an advocate of the new realism.

On the other hand, there were signs that modern science, by infinitesimal degrees, might be aiding in the solution of the Mystery. . . .

But religion, Hodder saw, was trusting. Not credulous, silly trusting, but thoughtful trusting, accepting such facts as were definitely known. Faith was trusting. And faith without works was dead simply because there could be no faith without works. There was no such thing as belief that did not result in act.

Right-About Turn

A popular rector tells a good story against himself.

Going up the steps of his church to take service, he was accosted by a stately old dame in difficulties with her breathing.

"Pardon me," she said, "but would you do me the favor of assisting me up the steps?"

They reached the door when the old woman pausing for a moment's rest, said: "Pardon me once more, but do you happen to know who is preaching this morning?"

"The rector, madam," replied the cleric.

"Oh!" she said. "Then might I beg you to do me another favor?"

"Certainly," replied the rector once more. "What can I do for you?"

"Would you," said the old woman, "be so good as to assist me down the steps again."

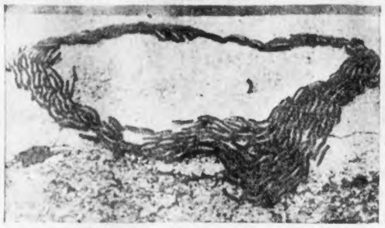
AMERICAN POLO PONIES—They have arrived in England for matches next Spring. Third from right is Selina, 23 years old, but one of the best in the game. (c) U. & U.

MUST HAVE FUR — Everything is furrier this Winter than ever before. Milady's negligee has fur about the neck, her slippers have fur "trimmins" and — sh-h-h—so have her garters. What fur? — International Film Service.

DOLL PORTRAITS—E. O. Hoppe, noted English artist, has brought this latest fad to America. Doll portraits of prominent people. This one is our w. k. screen vamp, Theda Bara. (c) K. & H.



WE WONDER.—This is a procession of caterpillars. They follow each other around. Is the congestion at the right caused by slow ones or is the belle of the ball there? —(Int.)

STEAK AND EGGS FOR GREYHOUNDS—Oscar Asche of London and other parts of the British Empire recently returned to London from Australia. Mr. Asche brought with him five greyhounds which he intends to enter in the dog shows this Winter. The greyhounds are fed only on fresh eggs and rump steak. "Six in the water, easy," shouts the kennel cook. And Fido eats. —(International)

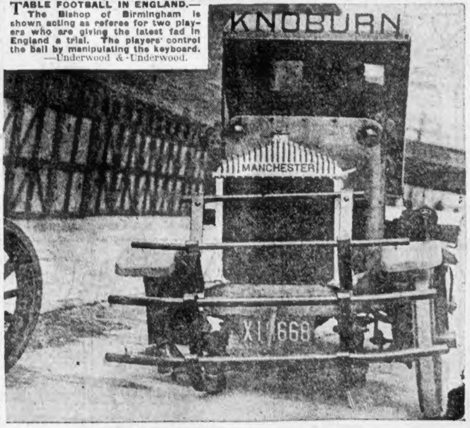
THIS IS THE OLD SHIP ITSELF.—At least it is a small model which is perfect in every detail. This replica of the good ship Mayflower in which the Pilgrims made their perilous trip to this continent is on exhibition at the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, D. C. The tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock is being celebrated this year. They landed on Dec. 21, 1620, in case anyone doesn't happen to know it. (International.)



NEW DEVICE FOR AUTO TRUCKS.—J. L. Hyland, the well-known inventor, has devised an automobile truck attachment designed to act as a fender to save the life of any person struck and at the same time enables the truck to slide along the pavement in case a front wheel comes off. Overturning trucks often block traffic for hours at a time. Photograph shows how this is prevented by the new attachment. —(c) Underwood & Underwood.

VENUS A LA BLUE LAW.—At a recent art exhibition in St. Petersburg, Fla., the reformers swept into the hall and dressed the nude statues and paintings up. This is how they left Venus. (Wide World)

WILL WE COME TO THIS?—Costumes depicting the "vanity of woman" have been designed by Poiret and are causing a sensation in Paris. This is the "Powder Puff." Naturally the powder puff holds first place among women's vanities. In these days of sensational changes in styles, is it possible that we may come to this? The feminists say no, but one can never tell. —(c) K. & H.

Stocks Irregular; Call Money 7%; Foreign Exchange Heavy

LITTLE CHANGE IN BOSTON

Local Market Irregular and Narrow in Price Movement; Curb More Active

As a rule stocks were lower in Boston at the opening, but there were gains enough to warrant the list being designated irregular then and subsequently during the morning. The market had considerable breadth, but this did not apply to price range. In most cases fluctuations were small. Coppers were down as a rule, a number selling at previous lows during the morning. St. Mary's Land was one to make a new one for 1920. Packing shares were quiet. United Shoe continued to be active and much of the selling of this stock and the coppers was construed as being for income tax purposes. Calumet & Hecla, St. Mary's Land and Ahmeek were off a point or more by the second hour.

Fractional gains were made by Boston Elevated, Calumet & Arizona, Island Creek, Ventura, American Sugar, Carson Hill and Waldorf. Among stocks to recede a little were American Woolen preferred, Copper Range, East Butte, Mohawk, Old Dominion, North Butte, United Shoe, U. S. Smelting, National Leather, Eastern Manufacturing, Atlas Tack, which sold at new low for the year; Bigheart, Gray & Davis and Woolworth.

CURB HAD ACTIVE START.

The Curb had an active start, but grew quiet during the morning. It was irregular at the outset and later. Early leaders were Crystal, Randolph and United Verde Extension. Among those to advance at the start were Albany Divide, Allied Oil, Crystal and Salt Creek Producers new stock. Weak ones included Denbigh, Eureka, Eureka South Holly, Gardner Motor, Imperial, Randolph and Texana.

At the end of an hour Crystal was off 1 cent at 39 cents, Randolph 3 cents at 65 cents, Arizona Tip Top half a cent at 6¼ cents, Boston & Montana 1 cent at 40 cents, Texana 3 cents at 12 cents, Gardner Motor ⅛ at 14⅞ and United Verde Extension ⅛ at 22⅞. Salt Creek Producers was up ⅛ at 9⅞. Eureka South Holly and Imperial had recovered losses.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Everett, Mass., has sold to the Old Colony Trust Company, at 6.40 per cent. discount, plus a premium of $3.25, a temporary loan of $100,000, maturing $20,000 September 15, and $80,000 October 15, 1921.

For November the Eastern Steamship Line reports that its deficit increased $23,486 to $68,162, but from January 1 to the end of November it reports $70,715 surplus. The latter, however, is a decrease of $253,210.

Nashua, N. H., will receive proposals until 10 a. m., December 31, for a temporary loan, dated January 3, payable December 1, 1921.

General Manager Oscar Rohn says the East Butte mine and smelter will not be shut down unless the company can neither sell nor borrow on its copper.

The Leonard Construction Company has declared a stock dividend from surplus of $1,000,000 and it is expected that another stock dividend will be declared early in 1921.

Manchester, N. H., will receive proposals until 2 p. m., December 30, for $300,000 5 per cent. coupon "school" bonds, dated January 1, 1921, and payable $15,000 January 1 in each of years 1922 to 1941, inclusive.

Shipments by the Island Oil & Transport Corporation from Mexico amounted to 742,433 barrels from December 1 to 20, inclusive.

The Boston & Main may obtain $6,656,470 from the government this week for betterments and equipment, the Interstate Commerce Commission having approved the loan.

The Cuban Portland Cement Company's $969,000 three-year 7 per cent. convertible notes will be paid off at maturity on January 1, at par and accrued interest, at the New York and Boston offices of Hayden, Stone & Co., and at the National Shawmut Bank.

Granby copper production in November was 2,465,585 pounds, which compares with 2,298,500 in October this year and 1,776,908 in November last year.

An Opportunity of a Life Time for the Bond Investor

With lower money rates in sight, owing to the heavy liquidation in commodity markets, the trend of bond prices is toward the higher pre-war levels, and for that reason investors should not delay their bond purchases, especially as present quotations in many instances offer an opportunity of a lifetime to secure a return of 8% to 10%

This is particularly true of high grade railroad bonds, which are in a position now where they not only afford an exceptional income return, but, if held for a reasonable pull, possess unusual possibilities for market profits as well.

Many investment bargains among railroad bonds are listed in a circular on the bond situation which we will send to anyone free upon request. Ask for BA-56

United Cigar Stores' Trade

It is estimated that the United Cigar Stores are now serving 1,500,000 customers daily, and the day before Christmas their sales totalled $1,400,000. Ten years ago 70 per cent. of sales were cigars. Now the business is divided approximately as follows: Cigarettes 42 per cent.; cigars, 40 per cent., and smoking, plug and miscellaneous goods, 18 per cent.

Dividend Declarations

A stock dividend of 33 1-3 per cent. has been declared by H. Jacobs & Sons, Inc. This increases the capital stock from $750,000 to $1,000,000.

Allegheny Steel Tube Company declared a surplus dividend of 10 per cent. on common, payable January 25 to holders of record January 15. The regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on preferred will be paid on January 2 to holders of record December 22.

The Hupp Motor Car Company declared quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on common, payable February 1 to holders of record January 15.

RAILS HIGHER, OILS DOWN

Sugars Show Strength in an Active New York Market; Crucible Under Pressure

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, but the majority were showing gains and the tone was rather strong. There had been improvement in the second hour. Rails remained the strongest group, while oils failed to rally much. Crucible was under steady pressure, but like Atlantic Gulf recovered a little ground. American Smelting showed a small gain at the end of the morning.

Steels were mixed as to price movement. The market was fairly active, first hour transactions approximating 200,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. With the exception of demand sterling, the principal foreign exchanges were quoted lower.

WEAK SPOTS AT OPENING.

The market had an irregular opening with gains and losses about evenly balanced. Rails showed the most and industrials the least strength. The majority of carriers were up a little at the start, but the price range was narrow for stocks in general. Only a few moved up or down a point on initial sales. The market had some weak spots, including Crucible, Atlantic Gulf and American Smelting. All the three sold at new lows for the year and the last named at its lowest record figure. The others declined about four points within a few minutes. U. S. Rubber, one of the weakest issues on Monday, opened more than a point higher and quickly reacted and recovered. Sugars had a better tone and American Sugar soon showed a point gain. Oils were off and steels averaged but little lower. Equipments were heavy, but Baldwin rallied. Coppers and motors were not in evidence to any extent. Before the end of an hour many issues were above the opening level, but the market was still irregular.

BEARS SLOW TO COVER.

There has been surprise expressed that the short interest has not covered to any extent with stocks as low as at present. The reason is said to be a desire to evade income tax liability for the profits they would make on this year's transactions. Aside from this it may be said that bears think they have plenty of time in which to make any desired adjustments. They are of the opinion that there is nothing in the business outlook or general situation to make them shift tactics at once. They may wait too long. Rails are showing more strength because latest reports as to November earnings are more favorable. It is understood that carriers as a rule have done even better this month. More domestic and foreign business is being done by this country than scaremongers know about or acknowledge.

Little Copper Sold

Little copper is being sold, although inquiries are increasing, especially from wire concerns. Price shading is encouraging consumers to hold off and continue hand-to-mouth buying. The following was said at the beginning of the week concerning some current transactions: "Due to small sales recently the price of spot and prompt copper is 13 cents a pound delivered, as some who have made bookings are desirous of shifting the engagement at the present time, rather than to wait until first week of next year with possibility of having to take the copper and warehouse it."

Better Money Outlook

President James S. Alexander of the National Bank of Commerce of New York expects less credit strain next year. He says: "Business men are justified in feeling confident that the money situation in the United States in 1921 will be a very different matter from what it has been during 1920."

Vast Army of Depositors

Depositors in the mutual savings banks of the State of New York number more than 3,900,000, and the interest on their savings for the last half of this year is estimated at $50,000,000. At the end of July last their deposits totalled $2,898,228,940, an increase of $130,933,141 during the first half of 1920.

More Cotton Goods Sold

Sales of cotton goods in the Fall River market last week totaled the most for any such period in more than two months, approximating 75,000 pieces. The inquiry for nearly all styles increased.

Coal Roads Doing Better

Coal road earnings increased in November. For the month Delaware and Hudson reports increases of $1,333,046 in gross and $494,902 in net operating income, while gains by Norfolk & Western were $2,315,983 in gross and $695,739 in net.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Wheat started ¼ to 1¾c. lower. Corn opened ¼ to 1c. lower and oats were off ⅛ to ¼c. Provisions opened lower. Opening prices were: Wheat, March 1.63¾ to 1.64; May 1.58; corn, December, 69⅝c, May 72¼ to 72⅛; July 73¾ to 73⅞; oats, December 45¾, May 48¾ to 48⅞; lard, January 12.70, May 13.15; ribs, May 12.02.

California Petroleum reports for the nine months ended with September, surplus after charges and Federal taxes of $1,765,380 against $1,450,221 for the corresponding period in 1919.

For November Union Pacific reports that operating revenue increased $2,636,580, while its gain in operating income was $1,304,078.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Dec. 28.—The cotton market opened easier. Trade was quite active here early, Liverpool and Wall Street interests were the heaviest sellers. After selling off about 10 points under the initial levels, the market struck covering orders. Opening prices were: January, 14.10; March, 13.90; May, 14.00; July, 14.10; October, 14.20.

Let Us Raise Monument to Yankee Division in France

A great many army divisions, particularly those of the regular army, have erected monuments commemorating their part in the war upon French soil where that valorous part was played.

But the Yankee Division has erected no memorial in France and has none there except what lingers in the grateful recollections of those French men and women and children who personally met our young men from New England, knew them as New Englanders, and liked them as New Englanders.

Of course, when we deal with outsiders we are as a single people having no sections and no division of sentiment. But on the other hand, each part of our country has its local history and traditions and pride and solidarity. When the people of France and those who visit the scenes of the war from the rest of the world wander over the battlefields and see the monuments to soldiers of other parts of America, they ought also to see monuments to the soldiers from New England.

Our soil is not fertile, nor is it easy to cultivate, and we are far from the source of raw material and our climate is rigorous. We labor under many handicaps in New England, which are, in a measure, offset by our traditions and the respect which those traditions have won for us. We must never hide our light under a bushel. In our case it surely pays to advertise, and there is no better advertisement for New England to the rest of the world than that which will commemorate the deeds of her young men on the battlefields of the great World War.

Let us raise a monument to the Yankee Division in France.

Disturbing evidence of sabotage in the plumbing business was produced before the joint legislative committee investigating building conditions in New York.

It appears that the soil pipe manufacturers of the country have been trying rather successfully to prevent the use of innovations in the art which would reduce the cost of building. We presume that these innovations are the result of new inventions tending to reduce the labor cost and the cost of material in plumbing.

It appears that this effort at sabotage by the soil pipe manufacturers is being supported by the master plumbers' associations and also by the journeymen plumbers' unions. Thus all the elements in the plumbing business from manufacturer to employing contractor and contractor's employes are said to be in the controversy. Now, relatively, by far the most expensive part of building construction today is the plumbing. The cost of plumbing is out of all proportion to the cost of other parts of a building.

It is part of the philosophy of the Hearst newspapers to acknowledge that the laborer is worthy of his hire. But it is one thing to assume, until shown to the contrary, that the high cost of labor, due to high wages, is justifiable, and it is quite another thing to assume that it is right to prevent the introduction of those labor-saving devices or material, saving devices which the advance of the arts and the invention of genius of man supplies us in a steady flowing stream for the advancement of civilization and of the increased world's wealth.

If labor were permitted to prevent the introduction of labor-saving machinery, labor would be the first to suffer and would be the greatest sufferer altogether, for labor-saving machinery reduces the cost of living more than anything in the world. The workman may ask how labor-saving machinery reduces the cost of living when the cost of living has gone up so constantly in the last fifteen years. The answer to that question is that with the greatly increasing population of the world and with the increased population of the cities, we would not be able to live at all, so high would be the cost of living, if it were not for labor-saving machinery.

Now we do not mean to intimate that organized labor and the workingman is guilty alone of this kind of sabotage. As a matter of fact in this very instance he is only one of three parties in the controversy, the other two parties being employers. Moreover, our great railroads and our public service corporations are notoriously guilty of this kind of sabotage. Our American railroads are the most destructive of human life and limb of all railroads in the world. The managers know a safety device which would reduce the danger of travelling upon railroads to a minimum. That device has not been adopted because it would cost a large sum of money which railroad managers would rather spend in far more profitable ways to those who put them there and keep them there. It has also been known that a man who has an invention which applies to a railroad and would improve its operation must do business on the side with some important railroad official before he has a chance of having his device adopted. This is true of all the public service corporations operated and owned by private interests.

Borah Should See Imperative Need of Big Navy

Senator William E. Borah moved a resolution in the United States Senate for an agreement between the United States and Great Britain and France, the three leading naval powers, to disarm, or rather to suspend naval building under circumstances which would leave Great Britain with twice the naval power we have and in combination with Japan, whose ally she is, with three times the naval power of the United States.

Lloyd George, the British Premier, in discussing this resolution, suggests that Great Britain cannot disarm while the United States is outside the League of Nations. To this, Senator Borah properly replies that if Great Britain intends to wait until the United States joins the League of Nations before she stops her naval building she will never stop.

This is good sense from Senator Borah. He can now see how far he is likely to get with his resolution. We hope that as an alternative he will consent to a navy which is adequate to our self-defence.

More Truth Than Poetry

A Political Carcassonne

By S. E. KISER

ROOT may be in the Cabinet
When Harding takes control of things,
And Hays and Knox and Hughes may get
A chance to help to pull the strings,
But there is one man I could name
Who will not hear a thrilling call
To join those who sit in the game—
He hasn't any chance at all.

THEY'LL send a lot of men away
To represent us overseas;
In Portugal and Paraguay
Our consuls will be claiming fees;
Our wise ambassadors will go
To Paris, London, and to Rome;
It's safe to bet a million, though,
That one man will remain at home.

THERE will be many men to pick
When Harding gets himself installed,
And Jim and Jack and Tom and Dick
Will answer as their names are called;
Already they've begun to plan
To rush the counter for their pie;
But I could name a certain man
Who knows his needs will not apply.

I'VE always had a hankering
For some secure and easy berth
Where I'd not have to do a thing
To earn my pay or prove my worth,
But all my earlier hopes are gone;
The man who did not live to see
The splendid towers of Carcassonne
Had nothing—not a thing—on me.

ROOSTERS WILL BE MUZZLED SATURDAY NIGHT

When the advocates of the blue laws get things arranged in accordance with their desires eggs that are laid on Sunday will be considered unfit for consumption.

Stars and Stripes

A soiled hand may perform a noble deed, but an unclean mind stains all conduct.

When a traitor is shot he dies for his country's good; but that doesn't make him a patriot.

A mirror without light is no better than any other glass; so a mind in the dark is incapable of reflection.

To kill oppression is to give birth to freedom.

LEARN HOW TO REST

Perhaps the reason you are so run down and tired all the time is because you do not know how to relax when you have the opportunity.

The human machine cannot run successfully under constant strain.

If the line of recreation you follow after your day's work is something which you do under pressure and excitement you are not giving your nervous system rest.

When you reach home at night and have had your dinner you feel uneasy unless there is something to keep you going at high speed, or you read so rapidly that it is a strain on your mental apparatus and again you gain no rest.

If after dinner you hurry to do this or that, or if you hurry to go here or there, you are allowing your day time occupation to pull on your vitality and nervous energy.

When the pressure of daily work is over you should be able to loosen up and relax in a comfortable position and be at ease with yourself and the world.

Learn to be comfortable and easy and contented about your home and in what you do by way of entertainment.

RUNAWAY SUNS FLY TO—WHO KNOWS?

By Edgar Lucien Larkin
Director Mt. Lowe Observatory.

KAPTEYN, the eminent astronomer from the observatory in Groningen in Holland, devoted years to measuring plates, the negatives of the new series of accurate photographs of the celestial vault, at night in the different astro-physical observatories of the modern world, modern scientifically. He made measurement of positions of many thousands of the minute dots on the sensitive plates with extreme accuracy by means of a measuring machine which has a series of movable spider threads in the focal plane of highly magnifying lenses. Within the historic period of man's career here on earth no such work had been done before. He measured plates secured by long exposure to the sky on dark, clear nights, in the focal planes of the largest telescopes in the world, both refractors and reflectors. These were selected from among 25,788 plates, secured after years of most difficult and arduous toil by observatory workers, and the selections were from opposite sides of the celestial vault.

Thus suppose he measured a plate of the area 1 degree square in, say, right ascension 6 hours and in north declination 10 degrees. Then he would measure one in R. A. 18 hours and in south declination 10 degrees. These would be precisely opposite.

This process was new in astronomy at the time, and we toiled to secure many opposites. If we stand in the centre of a "merry-go-round" we see the riders moving in opposite directions on opposite sides. If one side is moving northward, the side 180 degrees from it, on the opposite side, will be moving toward the south. Kapteyn discovered a similar motion among suns. Hundreds measured on one side of the stellar structure would be moving in a measured direction. Then by measuring on the other side they were found to be in motion in an opposite direction.

From these measurements he thought that what we now call our universe, our sidereal structure, of now known to be not less than three billion suns, is in rotation about an axis. This would be rotation of itself; but continued research discovered that the entire structure does not have this general rotation in a complete form. Some of the suns stream along together.

Thus the area of the celestial vault contains thousands of suns, having the Pleiades as an apparent centre, which seem to be moving as if they were related. All of the suns in Taurus thus drift. Whether their direction is permanent or will finally be merged into the universal rotation cannot now be determined. Other currents of suns are detected partially. The vast subject will require many more years, maybe centuries, fully to expound. One writer several years ago expressed the idea that a colossal stream of suns is flowing entirely through our universe of suns. This stream is foreign to our stellar structure, if such flight is a reality. The concept is simply astonishing, but at present held in abeyance not put into textbooks of exact mathematical science.

If the stream exists, then vivid imagination fails to imagine whence came the millions of suns or whither they are going.

"Runaway suns" are in a class by themselves. They are flying through infinite space at such terrific speed that, if not slowed down, they will pass entirely through our sidereal universe and leave it in the rear.

Normal suns move with velocities between four and eighty-five miles per second. But when giant suns are seen to be moving with the high speed of from 200 to actually 700 miles per second, they are at once classed by themselves, and the expressive term "runaway suns" was given. It is known how much matter is required to impart by attraction of gravitation to any mass capable of free motion in cosmic space any given velocity. When the quantity required to set up a speed of 700 miles per second was computed, the imagination was staggered. The quantity was so enormous that all matter now existing in visible bodies, that is, bodies in the grasp of energy intense enough to cause them to radiate energy as light, that is, to become suns, is not sufficient. That is unless, indeed, the suns contain matter beyond all that has been thought probable.

Then the idea arose, may not gigantic quantities of matter exist that do not emit light, and therefore cannot be seen?

THE ART OF 'GETTING BY' DODGING WORK

"PICK YOUR PROF, or the Art of Getting By," is the title of a little pamphlet issued by the Institute for Public Service.

It contains much useful information to the youth of our land, and will help them to avoid nervous breakdown from overwork at college.

There are all sorts of interesting things to do at college if one can dodge work. There are tennis, basketball, boxing, football and other amusements where one can wear a sweater with a big "U" on it. Then there are larks of evenings, card parties, food feasts and escapades

One can get some fun out of working on a college paper, joining the various clubs and Greek Letter societies. One can go to rushes, be a good dancer and a star fusser.

If it were not for the teachers and classes, college would not be such a bad place.

In order to avoid the peril of becoming a grind, one should learn the art of Picking his Profs.

(1) Sound out the students during your first few days at school. You can easily ascertain the disagreeable teachers who make a fellow work.

(2) Lecture courses are nearly always snaps. Kid the Prof along and make him do all the talking.

(3) Almost every Prof has some vanity or weakness. Find it out and work it.

(4) Learn the first few lessons perfectly. Once you get your reputation established you can pull the wool over the teacher's eyes easily.

(5) The most dangerous kind of Prof is the kind that makes you honestly want to learn. Shun such. The first thing you know you will become a shark, and lose caste entirely with the regular fellows.

(6) Study the art of flattery. If you can find a Prof who likes to show off, the rest is easy. Always laugh at his jokes. Pay him compliments, the rawer the better.

(7) Learn your Prof's hobby. Whether you are about it or not, ask him questions. Get him to talking. Thus he will take up all the time in the classroom and forget to mark you.

(8) Cultivate facial expressions of childlike innocence and interest. Let the Prof see you look up at him as a Hottentot looks up to his idol.

(9) If the Prof is a bit shy, and you see you are not making a hit, visit him outside of the classroom and ask him questions on his hobby. Get him to recommend books to you, and let him see you write down the titles in your note book. You've scored. You need never refer to them again.

(10) Ask the Prof to repeat what he said yesterday, and appear to listen with rapt attention.

(11) Gauge him. Estimate him. If he likes profuseness, use a lot of words. If he prefers conciseness, affect a laconic air.

(12) Encourage him to talk about himself.

(13) Find out what games he plays, what fiction he reads, what shows he likes, what stores he patronizes, and let him discover that you have the same tastes.

(14) Bluff. Put your best foot forward.

(15) If you do not know anything about a subject, and you are asked to recite, don't hesitate. Start right off talking. Keep your eye on the Prof. Pretty soon you will see he is interested in some point you touch. Then hang on to that and let the rest go.

(16) Argument is sometimes good, sometimes dangerous. Watch the Prof. If he is intolerant and dictatorial, agree with him always. If he prides himself on his ability to arouse discussion, give him plenty of it.

(17) Make a list of questions nobody can answer and spring them on the Prof. when you get a chance. Participate a wrangle if possible. All such tactics keep the Prof's mind off the disagreeable business of finding out how little you know.

(18) The curse of college life is boredom. Driven by this you are likely to get interested in study if you are not careful. To avoid this one great preventive is sleep. Sleep all you can. If you don't sleep enough in bed, sleep in class.

(19) A great many Profs are honest, alert-minded, earnest and intelligent. They are self-disciplined and hence know how to discipline you. Avoid these. There will always be found some fop or egotist. Pick these. They are much more easily handled.

(20) Learn how to cram. You can then idle your way through the term and cram like sixty along toward the end and Get By.
